Free Workshop Reveals 7 Ways To Slash College Costs

A free workshop is being held for parents of college bound high school students at the Dublin Library 100 Civic Plaza March 13th and the Pleasanton Library 400 Old Bernal Ave. March 15 from 6:30 to 7:30pm. The workshop will focus on little-known ways of getting money for college, no matter how much income you make, or how good of a student you have.

The class will include such topics as how to double or triple your eligibility for free grant money, the secret to sending your child to a private or UC school for less than the cost of a junior college, and the single biggest mistake that 9 out of 10 parent make when planning for college.

The workshop is being taught by Len Dempsy a college planning expert. Seating is free, but limited to the first 25 people that call in. To reserve a seat, call 925-218-0611. Visit WWW.ADVANCEDCOLLEGEPLANNING.COM for more information.

Enjoy your commute to work Monday—in the dark

If you like a little daylight with your early morning cup of coffee, plan to sleep in a bit later Sunday—and for the next several weeks, too. Daylight Saving Time comes three weeks early this year thanks to our Congressional leaders who think that we’ll save energy by coming home from work when there’s still a bit of daylight and make dinner by the glow of the setting sun. That means that at 6 a.m. Monday when many of us arise to get a head start on rush hour traffic or help the kids get ready for school (which will be like 5 a.m. was this morning), it’ll be pitch black again. Just as we were beginning to enjoy some early daylight, Congress has told us to “spring ahead” at 2 a.m. this Sunday. By decree, we’ll also be “falling back” a week later than usual, this year at 2 a.m. Sunday, Nov. 4, again all in the spirit of saving energy. At least the fall extension make sense in that it gives Halloween trick-or-treaters an extra hour of late fall daylight to complete their door-to-door visits more safely. Candy manufacturers are happy. They’ve lobbied for years to have DST extended through Halloween.

Congress enacted the Energy Policy Act in 2005, containing that we’re used to getting up in the dark anyhow and will now have the chance to enjoy more sunlight in the evening, take walks outdoors to stay healthy and get some outdoor projects started. Additionally, our lawmakers thought there might be emotional benefits since we typically feel better—or so they say—with more daylight. Since fewer lights will be turned on early in the evening, and with energy costs so high, we may even cut our electric bills, which could make everyone feel even better. Originally, the Policy Act was written to extend daylight time by two months, but some vocal opponents fought that drastic of a change. Farmers say that DST has a negative impact on their livestock in general, reducing the productivity of milk, eggs and, we suppose, the number of farmers in the field at 7 a.m. or so when it’s still dark.

There are other considerations which we’ll have to wait to for. Railroads, including Amtrak, trains, will keep to their published schedules as if, like the airlines, there should be no change in departure and arrival times. Except in Hawaii which doesn’t recognize DST. Nor does Arizona, except on its large Navajo reservation, which moves to daylight time. Most television sets, computers and even many clocks now automatically adjust for daylight and standard time, although those manufactured before the law was changed two years ago might take three weeks to catch up this spring and another week to reprogram in the fall. Microsoft cautions that some of its older products, including Windows XP SP1 and Windows NT4 will require manual updates. Even in the banking industry, where ATMs time-stamp every customer transaction, not everyone is aware of the March 11 change. But if they managed their way through Y2K seven years ago, an early change to daylight time shouldn’t be a problem.

History buffs might want to know that it was Benjamin Franklin who first proposed tinkering with the clock, but it wasn’t until World War I that Congress actually implemented the change, although briefly. In 1966, Congress set daylight saving time to begin in April and end in October, but temporarily extended the period during the mid-1970s energy crisis. In 1986—20 years ago—Congress made the last change, setting 2 a.m. on the first Sunday in April to start daylight time and to end it at the same time on the last Sunday in October. Again, all in the interest of saving energy. We’ll see...
Q: Do you think airlines should have a “Passenger’s Bill of Rights”?

Annette Lommerin
Stay at Home Mom
I absolutely believe they should. Airlines are a business and they have forgotten to put the consumer first. They have treated us like cattle and it is time that we stand up for ourselves.

Pat Landers
Nursery Manager
I am in support of as little regulation as possible. I think the economy will take care of it. If people don’t like a certain airline’s policies and customer service the public won’t use them anymore.

Sara Volking
Travel Agent
No, I don’t think there should be a Bill of Rights. The airlines have already put many restrictions on passengers and people associated with the airlines. They would end up charging everyone involved in and using the industry more.

Angel Gonzalez
Army Officer
Most definitely. I think the airlines are discounting passengers’ feelings and the rights that they have as human beings. Staying on an airplane for eight to 10 hours is just uncalled for. It is not just about getting the flight off the ground and being paid for that; it is about treating people with dignity.

Peter Goff
Tech. Consultant
In general I think most people should take pay attention themselves—sort of the “Caveat Emptor” philosophy. Consumers need to be aware, whether buying airline tickets or any other goods and services, that we have a choice in where we spend our money. The marketplace is a pretty good enforcer of good service.

Amador Valley Community Park reopens

13-acre park now has better irrigation, grading and grass

by Emily Atwood

After nine months of construction, the Amador Valley Community Park on Santa Rita Road is complete. Even though the fields are officially open, continued rainy weather may lead to closures for all city parks. This isn’t the first time stormy weather caused problems for Amador Park. Rain was perhaps the biggest challenge in the renovation project, as it was the reason for a two-month delay after construction started in February 2006.

Even with the delays Michael Fulford, city landscape architect, said they finished just ahead of schedule on the park and just under the budget of $375,000. The city approved the construction last August, but Fulford and others on the Park and Community Services staff decided to keep the fields closed until Feb. 20, when the fences went down.

“It’s a big investment for parks,” he said. “We kept the fence up to protect the investment. Now the fences are down and people are welcome to use it.”

Switch your clocks an hour forward Sunday

Daylight Savings starts three weeks early this year

For the first time, the nation will spring forward three weeks early. Usually, we would be switching our clocks an hour forward around the beginning of April, but instead we will observe the time change at 2 a.m. this Sunday.

It’s due to a resolution Congress passed which went into effect this year in an effort to conserve energy and make more use of daylight.

While many agree it’s a good idea, the early time change is raising concerns.

Earthquake shakes up business at local safety store;
Bay Area Red Cross reports busy start to year

by Janet Pelletier

While last week’s earthquake didn’t feel nearly as strong as the 1989 Loma Prieta one many may remember, it succeeded in rattling some people’s fears.

The Red Cross Bay Area had already been reporting a busy start to the year—a 50 percent increase in local disasters, a cold weather emergency and national deployments to the Midwest to assist with winter storms. Then a landslide happened in San Francisco’s North Beach, leaving 120 apartment dwellers homeless, and a 4.2-magnitude earthquake struck near Lafayette on March 1.

“We’ve been getting questions from people on how they can get prepared after the quake and that’s encouraging since we did a study last year that said that only 6 percent of people in the Bay Area were fully prepared for a disaster,” said Paul Rose, a Red Cross spokesman.

“The reason for that, Rose said, is because people have the mentality that a disaster isn’t going to happen to or affect them. The USGS [United States Geological Survey] says there’s going to be a major earthquake in the next 30 years—about 3, 400 people dead, 16,000 people injured and 400,000 people left homeless,” Rose said.

McNerney joins Firehouse Arts Center board

Newly-elected Congressman Jerry McNerney (D-Pleasanton) recently joined the Firehouse Arts Center Campaign Community Advisory Board Committee. The committee is dedicated to supporting the Pleasanton Cultural Arts Foundation’s efforts to fund the additional $3.5 million needed for the new Firehouse Arts Center.

The center, due to open in late 2008, will feature a 240-seat theater, art gallery space, two large art classrooms and a grand lobby. It will be built where the historic fire station currently rests along Railroad Avenue. PCAF is a non-profit organization taking the lead role in fundraising for the construction of the center in downtown Pleasanton and for ongoing arts activities in the local community.

The Community Advisory Board Committee includes representatives from the business and arts communities, educational organizations and the city of Pleasanton. Other members include Pleasanton Unified School District Superintendent John Casey, City Manager Nelson Fialho, President of the Hacienda Business Owners Association James Paxson and Pleasanton Downtown Association Executive Director Christina Saldivar.

“We are thrilled to have the support of so many prominent community members for this important project for downtown Pleasanton,” said Greg Reznick, president of PCAF. “These people share our vision for a new public arts facility that will enhance the vitality of downtown, provide economic benefits to our community, enhance arts education opportunities for our children and youth and provide local residents with a multitude of arts and cultural opportunities here in our own community.”

stroke of midnight on New Year’s Eve 1999 meant the dawn of a new millennium, some are similarly worried that the three-week-early time change this spring will cause computer and electronic problems.

Computer or operating systems programmed before 2005 will be affected by this because they are set up to change the time on April 1—the old date when clocks were changed. To update those systems, they will need to be reprogrammed or “patched” in tech terms. Both Microsoft.com and Apple.com have downloads to do just that. The other option is just manually changing the time.

Fire safety officials encourage the public to use the clock shifts as a reminder to check the batteries in smoke and carbon monoxide detectors.

Juanita received the 2005 Community Service Award from the Pleasanton Chamber of Commerce. Besides her school trusteeship, she was the founder of the Pleasanton Youth Collaborative; was one of the charter members of the board of directors for Pleasanton Partnerships in Education Foundation; and founded the Pleasanton Community of Character Coalition. Juanita served on the Chamber’s board of directors and also on the government relations committee.

On Dec. 9, 2005, the Pleasanton Weekly announced that Juanita Haugen had been selected as “Woman of the Year.” Last Fourth of July, she was presented with the Ed Kinney Community Patriot Award. Besides these local awards, Juanita was honored as the Association of California School Administrators “Friend of Public Education” for Alameda and Contra Costa Counties (1999); University of Southern California “Outstanding Alumnus” (1997); Soroptimist International of Pleasanton “Woman of Distinction” (1990); and California 15th Legislative Assembly District “Woman of the Year” (1989).

Always enthusiastic about lifelong learning, Haugen went from being a volunteer in her daughters’ classrooms to being a respected voice for public education at the local, county, state and national levels. In 1997 she was elected president of the California School Boards Association (CSBA). She was appointed by two governors to serve on the California Commission on Teacher Credentialing. She also served as president of California Suburban School Districts Association (1991-93). In 2005-06, she was president of the non-partisan California Elected Women for Education and Research, which promotes women in government. At the national level, Juanita was one of three school board members elected to the board of directors of the National School Board Association (NSBA). She was appointed by President Bill Clinton’s Secretary of Education Richard Riley as the only school district trustee to be a member of the governing board for National Assessment of Educational Progress. Juanita also was appointed by California governors to the Education Commission of the States, which serves in an advisory capacity for the national associations of state governors, legislators, and superintendents of public education.

Now you can watch the Pleasanton council, even on vacation

New webcast makes home, office computers local ‘watch-dogs’

by Jeb Bing

For the thousands of those who work in the private and public sectors in Pleasanton and for a chance to see local government in action, that opportunity has arrived.

Last Tuesday, the Pleasanton City Council began webcasting its meetings on the Internet, using the video cameras already televising the meeting for TV30 community television to place the same video on the city’s Web site. By logging on to www.pbtech.org/clients/pleasantoncc03062007.html, viewers can access the Web page that contains the video of the March 6 meeting, watch it from start to finish, or highlight segments of the meeting’s agenda to see those proceedings. Just like TiVo or videotape recording, the video can be backed up, forwarded, paused or skipped. Unlike regular broadcasts, however, it can’t be recorded, although those skilled with computers who have disk burners can download the video to their laptops and watch again.

TV30 covers the meetings of the Pleasanton City Council and most of its workshops live and also rebroadcasts those meetings several times in the following week on Channel 29. It also offers its own webcasts of those meetings which, again, they’re on air, can be taped at home. However, unless viewers catch the Channel 29 broadcasts when they air, they have to wait until the next scheduled broadcast. The webcast isn’t usually available for a week or more after the meeting.

By webcasting its meetings, the Pleasanton council has also extended its coverage area to anywhere in the world that can log in to the city Web site. TV30, however, sends its signals through Comcast cable. If viewers aren’t signed up for Comcast or live outside of its service area, they can’t watch TV 30 or its affiliated channels 29 and 28. City Council meetings of the four cities are broadcast on Channel 29, with school board meetings broadcast on Channel 28.

But after the recent temblor, some people have had “emergency” on their minds.

“It was right in the middle of the two strongest faults and for those people who said ‘I have nothing to worry about’—there’s a reason to get a disaster kit and get prepared,” he said.

The Red Cross sells kits that contain the basics to keep a person sustained for 72 hours on the organization’s Web site, www.redcross.org, including one for $50.

One local business is enjoying an increase in business after last week’s quake: Your Safety Place in Dublin—which sells earthquake and other safety-related supplies.

“This is just the wake up call that people needed,” said store owner Brian Klosterman. “Anybody who felt that quake was probably alerted pretty abruptly that we’re living in earthquake country and it’s something we need to pay attention to.”

The store, located at 7197 Village Parkway, has been open 10 months—with its official opening on the 100-year anniversary of the 1906 San Francisco earthquake. Klosterman had the idea for the store after searching for an emergency kit when all the Y2K buzz was going around.

“It took me a month, at least eight to 10 visits to stores, and even then I couldn’t find everything that I needed,” he said.

At Your Safety Place, kits for seniors, pets, the car, single-people and the family are offered, ranging from $20-150. The best seller is the four-person kit for $150 which includes a three-day supply of food and water (which has a five-year shelf life), a bucket that can become a toilet, blankets, solar crank power flashlight, duct tape, cording, waterproof matches, ponchos, first aid supplies and light sticks.

In addition to the retail operation, he said “road warriors” make contact with area schools, businesses and municipalities. He said the Pleasanton Police Department has purchased supplies from them as well as the city of San Ramon and Dublin and San Ramon school districts.

Newsfront
The 13-acre renovation project included replacing the irrigation system, leveling out the field and adjusting the drainage. After that work was completed, the fields were reseeded with a slightly different variety of grass.

“When you first grow grass, it’s delicate,” Fulford said. “Even a casual game of soccer or baseball could damage it.”

Next on the list of parks needing work are the new Alviso Adobe and Bernal Community parks. Both are in the final stages of planning and will soon be seeking price bids from contractors. Alviso Adobe, a project that has been in the works for about 10 years, is a 6.5-acre site that houses the oldest structure in Pleasanton. The park won’t have a sports or playground area, but would instead “convey the historic flavor of Pleasanton,” Fulford said.

Construction work for the Bernal park would be the first of many phases and would include three baseball fields (two of them lighted), a children’s play area, parking and restroom facilities. Many city parks, including Amador, require reservations for sports activities and special use. To make reservations, call 931-5340. And to see when the city will give the OK for field use, call the Sports Field Weather Line at 931-5360.

EASEMENT BY PRESCRIPTION

An easement gives someone the right to use (or walk or drive across) a specific portion of another person’s land. Someone can gain this right from you, record it in writing, and make sure it’s “openly and adversely” used so that the next owner of the property will have to honor it. Easements can also be created by prescription. For example, a man who bought a home with a boat dock was astonished to find, when he took possession of the home, that a neighboring dock owner was using the dock. The neighbor claimed to have an easement right to use the dock, since... 1. He had been using it openly (the legal term is “openly and adversely”)—in this case, the prior homeowner had no need of the dock and told his neighbor he could use it. 2. The use had been continuous and uninterrupted for five years. 3. The use was “hostile” to the true owner, which generally means it wasn’t in the owner’s interest. 4. The use was exclusive. And he used the dock under some claim of right (that is, he believed he had a personal right to use the property), especially as his use wasn’t contested for five years and it in no way denied the owner his own customary uses of the property.

In cases where use is okay but the owner wishes to avoid an actual easement, the owner can simply post a sign that says, for example, “Okay to park and walk here but may not use at any time,” so as to record a Notice of Permissive Use. Use is therefore never “hostile” to the owner and an easement cannot be claimed, even if the owner doesn’t have any use of the property. Opinion

Editorial

Juanita Haugen
Nov. 17, 1937 - March 5, 2007

Pleasanton and the education community have lost a tireless advocate for ever-better schools, teachers and curriculum in the death Monday of local school board president Juanita Haugen. A board member since 1979, she was re-elected repeatedly by an overwhelming majority of voters and served at least three terms as president, the position she held at the time of her death. Community leaders, teachers, school administrators, students and voters also supported her in 1988 when she led the referendum that unified the Pleasanton school district and again for two multi-million-dollar bond measures that provided the funds to expand, renovate and rebuild the nine elementary schools, three middle schools and four high schools: Amador Valley, Foothill, Village and Horizon. A fiscal conservative who wasn’t afraid to spend money when quality schools and education were at stake, she was fully convinced that the state budget crisis wouldn’t affect close schools, lay off teachers and even face bankruptcy. A household name in Pleasanton and the Tri-Valley, Juanita Haugen was equally well-known and praised in Sacramento and Washington, D.C., and in other states where her service and guidance on state, regional and national levels was well-documented. She was as comfortable lobbying for funds and better schools in the state legislature and Congress as at school board meetings, where she brought to Pleasanton the views of the very best educational leaders, so that we could implement them here and join that exclusive group of top-performing schools and students.

It’s almost three years now since Juanita has been with us. Because Juanita had such boundless energy and passion about public education, she was involved with organizations and causes across the nation. What that provided for Pleasanton was a unique perspective. As we celebrated her contributions and faced our challenges, we could always count on Juanita to provide us with the latest information and contacts. And she was able to keep up with the materials and issues the whole time (even in her final days).

—John Casey, Pleasanton school superintendent

Juanita was my mentor for many years and probably the reason I ran for the school board. Her involvement with children not only in Pleasanton but throughout the U.S. was an amazing commitment to kids. She certainly will be missed not only by the educational community in Pleasanton but all educators everywhere.

—Superior Court Judge and former school board member and president Steve Pulido

Juanita was the closest to being the state’s Ambassador of Education, if California ever had one. Every place that she went, whether it was to the state Legislature or at school board meetings or in classrooms, everybody recognized Juanita Haugen, admired and respected her and always paid close attention to her ideas and proposals because she was good at what she did. She helped changed a lot of laws in California for the better to make sure that school districts and school children throughout the state had the best curriculum and programs available.

—Buster R. McCurtain, former Deputy Superintendent for Pleasanton schools

She was truly a model citizen who believed in her cause in life and pursued that goal to her last day. The city cannot let her passing go unnoticed, as her contributions to education in our city, our state and our nation have left a trail that can never be covered over or buried beneath the politics that have become so pervasive throughout the country.

—Peter Bailey, Happy Valley, former General Manager of the Alameda County Fairgrounds.

Stoneridge extension would hurt city’s businesses

Dear Editor,

The Weekly’s editorial on Feb. 9 (“Nordstrom expansion delay a concern for Stoneridge, Pleasanton”) hits the nail on the head regarding the need to protect our businesses at Stoneridge Mall. It correctly points out that a “fierce retail competition is already under way among Pleasanton, Dublin and Livermore.” This fact is one of a long list of reasons why the Council should remove the Stoneridge extension from our city’s General Plan.

The logic is simple—with the planned addition of the upscale outlet mall at El Charro Road in Livermore, the Stoneridge extension would give shoppers from cities to the north and west an easy way to avoid congestion on I-580 by cutting through Pleasanton to spend money in Livermore. That’s right, Pleasanton tax dollars will make it easier for people, including our own residents, to shop in another city! Which begs the question, what is the real motivation for the Pleasanton Chamber of Commerce’s relentless support of the Stoneridge Expressway? That position is completely at odds with promoting businesses at our own mall.

Again, as the Weekly correctly points out, “As more retailers open close by, shoppers may find they can satisfy their buying needs without a trip to the mall.” And of course, “Stoneridge is a major contributor to the city’s revenue base.” Clearly, less business at the mall means fewer tax dollars for Pleasanton. The Stoneridge extension is a perfect example of the law of unintended consequences. Unfortunately, if we make that mistake there will be no way to reverse the flood of negative impacts on our beautiful community.

Dan Maslana, Pleasanton

Buyers can’t claim ignorance

Dear Editor,

In Janet Pelletier’s “Gridlock: Can it be fixed?” (cover story, Feb. 9), it is twice claimed that “Many who live in the newer homes along Stoneridge said it [the Stoneridge Extension] was never disclosed to them when they purchased their homes.” This has certainly not been my experience.

Back in summer 2000 when my wife and I were looking to purchase our first home, one of the many open houses we visited was one of these newer homes along Stoneridge Drive. Although it was seven years ago, I remember it clearly because we first learned about Stoneridge’s plan to extend Stoneridge to Livermore from the realtor showing that Stoneridge house. I expressed surprise that she would divulge this information. It obviously detracted from the desirability of the property. She explained that she was obligated to make full disclosure and that buyers would have to sign a document acknowledging the general plan at closing anyway.

For the sake of argument, let us assume some Stoneridge residents purchased without any knowledge of the extension. Their claims can be easily verified by inspecting the packet of papers signed at closing. If there is no signed disclosure on official record where there should be one, then I agree these residents have been wronged. But even then, I disagree with their apparent method of recourse. These aggrieved few should seek legal counsel and

Dear Editor,

I understand that traffic might increase and people have to be more cautious. But face the facts-an "artery" through Pleasanton?

I have been following the Weekly’s efforts to keep residents informed about the significant traffic issues currently before the City Council. I believe it is essential that the information we read is accurate. The Weekly’s Feb. 23 article about the Home Depot project proposed at Bernal/Stanley implied that only residents from the Valley Avenue/Santa Rita area are opposed to the proposed Home Depot. This is incorrect. The barrage of emails to the City Council came from residents all across Pleasanton. Our group, Stop Pleasanton Gridlock, represents residents from many neighborhoods (e.g., Vineyard, Downtown, Mohr, Hopyard, Valley, Bernal). Our goal is to educate the community about traffic-related issues and help find solutions to improve traffic across the city. Although the Weekly credited our group with generating such a large opposition to this project, the reality is that our group represents just a portion of the broad-based opposition to this project.

Pleasanton residents know that adding a “big box” retailer three miles from freeway access in the middle of neighborhoods is a drastic departure from city principles. All cities in our area with a Home Depot—including Pleasanton’s existing store—have stores next to freeways and away from neighborhoods. This is no accident. Pleasanton’s strategy of keeping commercial traffic on the periphery of the city and out of our neighborhood has been the guiding principle of our General Plan for more than a decade.

The reasons for opposing the proposed location are simple: 1. Semi-trucks—20 a day—deliver building materials. Pleasanton residents don’t want semi-trucks barreling through neighborhoods streets at all hours. Home Depot acknowledges that they can’t manage the routes of the trucks they do not own. They do not own the 70 percent of the trucks. 2. Peak business hours of a Home Depot, which is in the building materials/nineteenth construction industry, are during quiet weekends starting at 6 a.m. The 400 employees drive to and from work around the clock. 3. City documents report that the location will draw “cross-town” traffic and traffic from other cities impacting dozens of city streets. All 45 intersections documented in the city traffic report showed traffic increases, with several roads seeing increases of over 100 vehicles an hour on weekdays and an increase of nearly 200 vehicles an hour on weekends. In contrast, neighborhood shopping centers generally serve homes in just the nearby blocks.

My concerns and those of other city residents have nothing to do with the Stoneridge Drive extension or about disliking Home Depot. I like Home Depot and hope they continue to upgrade their existing Pleasanton store so they can stay healthy and successfully compete with the new Lowe’s store that is being added. Their continued success is good for Home Depot and good for Pleasanton because it protects our tax base and provides a valuable service.

The singular issue Pleasanton residents oppose is the Home Depot. Locating a Home Depot in the middle of residential neighborhoods and from a freeway is bad for the city whether or not Stoneridge Drive is extended. Let’s not make a mistake from which we’ll never recover.

Nancy Allen is a businesswoman and 20-year Pleasanton resident who heads a new grassroots organization whose Web site is www.stoppleasantongridlock.com. Its goal is to help find solutions for city-wide traffic congestion.

I-580 cut through would clear congestion

Dear Editor,

Why are people so afraid to make an “artery” through Pleasanton? I understand that traffic might increase and people have to be more cautious. But face the facts-the Bay Area is constantly growing, especially the Tri-Valley. Do people not already cut through Pleasanton from I-680 by Castlewood Drive to I-580 by Santa Rita Road? No matter what is or is not done, people are still going to get off the freeway to find a shorter route. Creating a new “cut through” space may bring the same amount of commuters or more through Pleasanton, but it could also get them out of Pleasanton quicker due to the fact that congestion might ease up on I-580. We may be putting in another Home Depot, so why not go the extra mile and build an addition to an already crowded freeway?

Pleasanton
The search for the missing

Local couple lends plane, time and counseling skills to search and recovery operations

by Rebecca Guyon

No one expects a loved one to go missing for any reason, so if it happens, the events that unfold are a shock. Most in this situation turn to law enforcement, and rightly so, but when the police have exhausted their resources there are groups of volunteers who keep the search going. Pleasanton residents Mike and Bridget Melson are two of these volunteers.

For the past year and a half, Bridge have donated their time and resources to and recovery operations for missing persons, also providing counseling services to families of missing.

Law enforcement can only look for a person so long before they need to turn the case to another case, Mike explained. That’s and other volunteers step in. They offer the search at no cost to the family using planes, cameras and any other equipment to find the missing. However, the sad part is that by the time the volunteers see that they are looking to recover rather than rescue a person.

“These are usually not rescues; this is family closure,” Mike said.

That is why Bridget got involved. A counselor, she saw that she’d be able to help the families down at base while Mike was plane searching for their loved ones.

“I got involved because we could see he could counsel while he could do search and recovery,” she said. “Helping missing teens is definitely my heart.”

The couple’s commitment started when they learned about Tim Miller at Texas Equu, a volunteer search and recovery team that works on cases across the country. Miller gained attention through his work on the Natalie case—the teenage girl who disappeared on a flight trip in May 2005. Mike saw Miller’s work on TV, he thought he could help with search and recovery operations using his pilot’s license and a plane housed at the Pleasanton Airport.

Mike called up Miller, saying if he was in California to give him a call, and a couple weeks later Miller responded, asking Mike to help with search and recovery operations in a missing a hike.

“What really got me with Nita’s case—when she went missing—and I thought she was my mom. That could be anyone’s mom,” Mike said.

The couple went up to the High Sierras with his pilot’s license and own airplane, Mike using a regular 10 megapixel digital shot photos out his window—something wasn’t a great idea at the time and doesn’t recommend anyone else trying. Since that first flight, Mike has added a camera mount on the bottom of his airplane, so all he has to do is click a button to take a photo directly over the site—better photo, as well as safety.

After taking hundreds of photos over the area, the crew examines them on the ground for any small irregularity in the photo.
Mike Melson and Mike help search for missing persons, while Bridget Melson helps comfort the families of the missing persons. She goes to continue helping families with their own resources. If the missing person has not been found, the families need to continue searching. Mike and Bridget have worked on more than 200 cases, including the case of Nita Mayo in the High Sierras. After searching for all the photos, it was this black smear that jumped out to the team as out of the ordinary. They noticed it because the shape and color does not match the landscape surrounding it, which is what they look for when searching for a body—anything that is slightly out of place. Local sheriff’s departments agreed the spot warranted a second look and went back to the cliffside to check it out. In the end, they were right—there was something out of place on the cliff, but it wasn’t what they were looking for. It turned out the spot was a patch of garbage bags caught in the brush.

“The families keep in contact,” Bridget said. “They still send us cards and letters. We’re Christians, so it’s also nice to pray. It feels like we’re doing something.”

Beyond the personal relationships they’ve developed, the Melsons were inspired, particularly by the case of Orcutt, to help prevent such sad endings for teens and their families by getting involved with prevention. The couple co-founded Trinity Life Solutions, a Christian-based counseling and life coaching center in downtown Pleasanton that offers a variety of counseling options for teens and their families.

“We work with teen groups to try to prevent these things from happening,” Bridget said. “We work with at-risk families because we see the burdens of families with missing children, and we’ve seen some turn up deceased, and that’s horrible. So together we said let’s do this, let’s help teens and young families.”

Mike said his next and fourth mission will probably be joining Miller on a search for a 38-year-old woman who went missing in the deserts of Southern California. On his own, Mike has offered help to families in the Bay Area whose stories he’s read in local newspapers, but most decline the offer.

“I have contacted families and offered to get involved on some case I find out about out here and usually the family’s reaction is, ‘Who are you and what do you want? You can’t be offering to help without wanting anything in return.’ Well, really are,” Mike said.

But still, Mike is undeterred. Both he and Bridget bring the kind of commitment and follow through to helping others as they do to their search efforts. When asked at what point do they leave a case and move on, Mike unflinchingly replied: “Until they’re found.”

Police Bulletin

Burglary suspect arrested after chase

Pleasanton police arrested a 19-year-old burglary suspect last Monday. Upon returning home, a resident discovered the man inside his home in the 4800 block of Golden Road. After the man called the police, the suspect fled the house and through neighbors’ yards before the police caught him on Black Avenue.

Other burglaries were reported to the police last week, including by a resident of Creekwood Court. A suspect allegedly entered the residence without force last Friday between 1 and 4 p.m. and took a computer and camera. The items were valued at $2,910.

A home in the 4800 block of Sutter Gate Avenue was burglarized last Thursday between 9:10 a.m. and 3:45 p.m. Entry was made through a side window and jewelry, a video camera and checks were reported missing. The loot was valued at $5,500.

REAL ESTATE ADVISOR

Diana Korpi

DO “BABY BOOMERS” DRIVE REAL ESTATE BOOMS?

Some economists link the buying habits of “baby boomers” to the demand for homes in this country. Since most of the “boomers” have already bought their homes, they conclude, the demand for housing is declining, along with the rapid appreciation in real estate during the last decade.

This argument presumes that the population will stabilize or decline as these potential buyers age and their children grow up. What is left out of such a picture is that the emerging real estate market is made up of people who are immigrating to this country. When these newcomers have achieved a stable income, they look for the best living situation they can find, often preferring buying to renting. Real estate continues to be an attractive investment opportunity. If you are sitting out the current market because you are afraid that the appreciation won’t continue, you may want to re-think your decision. Today’s market is providing opportunities for homeowners and smart investors from all over the globe.

If you or someone you know is thinking about buying or selling, contact Diana at ReMax Accord. Diana is committed to professional, attentive service to her clients - always willing to go the extra mile. When you deserve the very best, call 925-830-4764. www.dianakorpi.com

$ Mortgage Matters $

Interest rates, which way will they go?

As we start the New Year, many of you may be wondering what will happen with interest in the coming months. The answer is that nobody knows the answer with authority, but I am willing to give you some insight as to where I think they are headed.

The Federal Reserve has increased the “federal funds rate”, which affects the prime rate, thirteen times, from 1% to 5.1/4% in the last two years. This is done to keep the economy from getting too strong and not allowing inflation to rise to an unacceptable level. Presently it appears that the Federal Reserve is finished increasing the rate and could begin reducing it by the middle of 2007. That process would begin because the economy is showing signs of slowing, especially in the manufacturing sector, and inflation is staying within acceptable levels.

What does all this mean? That we should see at least stable interest rates with a possibility of lower rates by the third quarter of 2007 with upward and downward fluctuations intermittently during this period. Outside factors could affect this scenario, such as a strong hurricane season or a negative geo-political environment, any of which even could push oil prices higher than anticipated and reignite inflation.

That’s the way I see it.
