Foss passes the Dublin leadership torch to Smith

If you stopped by the city manager’s office at Dublin City Hall last Monday, you would have found Chris Foss at his desk on his final day in that chair.

Instead of taking accrued vacation time during the holidays, he planned to be there to “finish strong.” It reflects the passion that has driven his career in public service, the last 20 years of which have been spent in Dublin.

Thinking about his tenure, he summed one part quickly. “I bleed green and always will.”

Foss was succeeded on Thursday by Linda Smith, his right-hand person as the assistant city manager during his tenure. She will be the only fourth city manager in the city’s history. Rich Ambrose served for 26 years and laid the foundation. He was followed by Joni Patillo, his assistant and Foss, also from the assistant’s role. The city will celebrate its 40th birthday in July 2021.

Considering his tenure, Foss cited six balanced budgets in a row and a forecast that has the city fully funded for the next 10 years — that wasn’t the case earlier in his tenure. He pointed out that the city tradition ally has placed a high value on fiscal restraint and living within its means.

He also cited the strong economy and the new businesses that have called Dublin home.

He also made it clear how pleased he was that the City Council had selected Linda to follow him. They’ve known each other nearly 20 years and worked closely together in her stints as economic development director and assistant city manager.

“She’s been the best work partner I’ve ever had and we’ve been a team,” he said.

On their watch, the major new Kaiser facility was built, the Zeiss Innovation Center approved and the new public safety complex is being built and will open next year.

Foss expects the next five to 10 years to be marked by the same robust growth, particularly downtown where the council has approved a bold plan to reshape the big-box stores. The plan calls for up to 2,500 units in buildings as tall as six stories.

Smith, having worked the plan since it was first adopted in 2011, is perfectly positioned to help the landowners and the city implement that vision. The initial focus will be extending Golden Gate Avenue on the Hobby Lobby/Target parcel that has multiple owners.

It will be one of two major items on her plate.

The other will be the extension of Dublin Boulevard to connect with North Canyons Parkway in Livermore, giving valley residents another alternative to Interstate 880. It’s an expensive and important project with an estimated price tag at more than $150 million. The council now has set a definite route so the environmental work can be conducted and funding lined up. Smith said they will do federal environmental review and hope to land some federal funding.

One major challenge will come when the state issues the new regional housing numbers that Smith expects to increase significantly as legislators struggle to push local agencies to meet the housing crisis.

When asked what he was most proud about, Foss cited the team of people he works with and how carefully they select team members.

Smith jumped in and pointed out three innovative projects that Foss drove to make a difference. She cited Valor Crossing, a 66-unit affordable apartment development by Eden Housing, that gives preference to veterans. It grew out of a discussion they had after watching a “60 Minutes” piece about homeless veterans and asking what they could do.

The second project was the all- abilities playground built on the Dublin Sports Grounds to accommodate children regardless of disabilities. It’s the only one in the Tri-Valley.

The third one solved a huge problem for the school district. The city worked out an agreement so the district could build a new school on land planned for a park. Cottonwood Creek School is there today. The city also has approved a second park site for school district use — moves that saved the district and ultimately the citizens millions of dollars.

What’s ahead for Foss — he’s not sure, but he knows one thing. After 33 years of spending Tuesday nights at council meetings, he can find something else to do on Tuesday evenings.

ASKED AROUND TOWN

What do you hope to accomplish in the new year?

Sarah Gaia  Well-being coach
It is a difficult and complicated tightrope to walk, but by taking one careful step at a time and navigating my own course, my goal in 2020 is to figure out how I can best make my interactions with the universe have the broadest and most positive impact on humankind — both in my own community and on a larger, more global scale.

Kait Sloane  Quality control
My goal is to take more time to take good care of myself. My mind, my body, my spirit and my soul. Because if I don’t do that, I won’t be much good to others.

Harold Goldenberg  Consumer affairs
My primary goal for 2020 is to spend as much time with my beautiful family as possible. As my children grow older each year and get busier with their own lives, it becomes more difficult. But we all make the effort and it is so well worth it. Nothing is more meaningful to me than having a close-knit family. We all support and encourage one another to always be and do our best.

Bond McCall  Sales
I have both personal and professional goals for the coming year. On a personal level, there are a few relationships I’d like to work on. I haven’t invested an appropriate amount of time or effort into them, and I would like to rectify that. Professionally, I would like to meet all of my sales goals. And of course a promotion and a raise would be nice.

Susan Buscher  Artist
I am hoping to be more concise and succinct with everything I say.

Dublin community rocked as teens killed in crash on Foothill Road

Twin brothers, friend die on Christmas night; two others in car seriously injured

BY JEREMY WALSH and RYAN J. DEGAN

Three Dublin High School students died and two other teenagers were seriously injured in a solo-vehicle crash on Foothill Road in Pleasanton on Christmas night.

Javier Ramirez and twin brothers Mark Anthony Urista and Michael Urista, each 16 years old, were pronounced dead at the scene after their vehicle struck a power pole and a large tree not far from the Castlewood Drive intersection around 10 p.m. Dec. 24.

The other two teens in the car — Dublin High student Samantha Vargas Arceo and Jared Reynoso, the Uristas’ cousin — sustained major injuries and remain in the hospital.

The violent fatal crash sent shockwaves throughout the Tri-Valley community, which joined for an emotional vigil at Dublin High on Sunday to remember the lives of the departed boys, show support for the survivors and pull together for one another.

Hundreds of residents held one another, wept and heard loved ones tell stories about Ramirez and the Urista brothers.

“I am extremely shocked because I didn’t recognize as to how much of an impact they had on the community as a whole, three,” Ana Reynoso, the twins’ mother, said during a tearful address at the candlelight vigil.

“I definitely believe that we have always been folks who have been about community and told (the boys) to pay it forward, always help everybody that’s around you and always makes sure to leave people better than how you found them. I think they did an amazing

Livermore’s reopens

Alberto’s was red-tagged for a minor violation.

Alberto’s Cantina reopened last Friday after being cleared by the Alameda County Environmental Health Department following failed inspections the week before.

The popular Mexican cuisine restaurant and bar on Main Street in Pleasanton “was found to be in good condition with no evidence of vermin, follow-up pest control scheduled, all cleaning, food storage improvements and repair work completed except for a section of cove base repair that is pending,” according to Cynthia Barts, supervising special for the county.

Alberto’s was red-tagged for a week and a half after failing a routine inspection on Dec. 18 for a major violation of dead and cockroaches, plus over a dozen minor violations.

Screeners’ panel

The city’s Community Education Series is presenting a screening of “Screeners NEXT CHAPTER” at the Firehouse Arts Center on Jan. 16 at 7 p.m.

The film “examines the science behind teens’ emotional challenges, the interplay of social media, and most importantly how we can do to help our children build crucial skills to navigate stress, anxiety, and depression,” city officials said.

A panel discussion will follow the screening. Parents and guardians are encouraged to attend with their children, age 11 and up.

Pleasanton legislative update

Council talks new laws, pending bills with Bauer-Kahan

BY JEREMY WALSH

The State Legislature is set to reconvene after the winter recess on Monday, and the Pleasanton City Council recently received a recap of relevant legislative work in Sacramento from city staff and the Tri-Valley’s Assembly member, Rebecca Bauer-Kahan.

The hour-long discussion last month featured an overview of outcomes of key 2019 bills on which the council took a formal position, reflections from the Orinda Democrat on her original legislation during her freshman year and a look ahead at topics expected to dominate the lawmakers’ hearings in 2020 — likely led by housing.

“The conversation I’m pushing really hard with the Bay Area caucus and my colleagues is a much larger focus on the jobs-housing balance question, and not thinking of our region as this nine-county megaregion where you build a giant campus on the Peninsula and then you call us to build the housing and just putting more and more people on the road heading in one direction,” Bauer-Kahan said during the Dec. 3 council meeting.

“We have to rethink that because it’s breaking people here — our quality of life is suffering, and our environment is suffering because those people are all sitting in traffic,” she told the council.

CRASH

Hundreds attended a vigil held at Dublin High on Sunday to remember the lives of the three students who died in a Christmas night crash.

Superintendent Dave Marken said in a statement last week.

“Our entire community is mourning the loss of three Dublin High School students whose lives were taken much too soon,” Marken added. “We’d like to share our deepest condolences to the family and friends of our students and let them know they are in our thoughts during this difficult time.”

Supporters of those involved in the crash have launched GoFundMe pages to raise funds for the families and survivors; the campaigns had generated more than $120,000 combined between the three separate webpages as of Monday night.

Meanwhile, the circumstances of the triple-fatal crash on a narrow stretch of Foothill Road in unincorporated Pleasanton remain under investigation, according to Officer Tyler Hahn of the California Highway Patrol.

For many current and former Tri-Valley residents, news of the crash has brought to mind other fatal collisions on Foothill Road from over the years and rekindled conversation about traffic safety conditions on the road that winds through both well-populated and rural portions of Pleasanton down to Sunol. The crash on Christmas occurred on the portion of Foothill that runs next to a golf hole on Castlewood Country Club’s Valley Course.

The situation unfolded just before 10 p.m. Dec. 25 with a vehicle crossed into the northbound lane of Foothill Road for unknown reasons and then struck a power pole and a large tree on the side of the road, Hahn said. The force of the crash flipped the vehicle, ejected two of the occupants and trapped three others inside the vehicle.

Three of the occupants, including the driver, were pronounced dead at the scene, Hahn said. The two other passengers were transported to a local hospital with major injuries.

The CHP has not publicly identified who was driving, but Hahn said all occupants were under 18 years old.

The cause of the crash remains unconfirmed, but initial investigation indicates alcohol was not a factor, according to Hahn. Speed may have been a factor, but officers had not yet been able to talk to the surviving passengers to obtain information.

The power pole was severed at its base and upended, causing the transformer to rupture and spilling approximately 20 gallons of mineral oil on the roadway and adjacent dirt shoulder, according to Hahn. An active power line was also arcing near the roadway when officers arrived.

The downed pole caused a power outage in the area. That portion of Foothill Road was closed until late the next afternoon for the utility repairs.

Anyone with information about the crash can call the CHP Dublin Office at 828-0466.
Visit Tri-Valley hires next CEO

Farhad had led Solvang Visitors Bureau

By Jeremy Walsh

Longtime tourism marketing professional Tracy Farhad has been selected as the new CEO for Visit Tri-Valley.

Farhad, who has worked as executive director at the Solvang Conference & Visitors Bureau for the past 14 years, will begin her new role in the Tri-Valley on Monday, succeeding retiring CEO and president Barbara Steinfield.

“My family and I are very excited about making the Tri-Valley our new home and look forward to discovering all that the destination has to offer,” Farhad said in a statement. “It is such an honor to be taking on the position of CEO of such a highly reputable team and dedicated Board of Directors.”

Farhad will remain focused on destination marketing for Visit Tri-Valley, the tourism promotion organization representing Pleasanton, Livermore, Dublin and Danville that receives key funding from the $2.25 assessment on hotel rooms in the four communities.

She will lead its efforts to create awareness of the Tri-Valley as a tourism destination and booking weekend sporting events that generate hotel patrons, according to Visit Tri-Valley officials.

“With a strong focus on digital marketing and social media campaigns, Visit Tri-Valley also targets the Bay Area for weekend getaways and works with representation in China and the UK to bring international visitors and media here,” they said.

Farhad has worked in marketing for tourism in California for nearly the past two decades, most recently at the visitors bureau for the small city of Solvang, a tourist destination known for its Danish village downtown and surrounding wine industry just off Highway 101 in Santa Barbara County.

Prior to that, she was employed as cultural tourism and membership manager at Visit Santa Barbara. Officials counted among her career successes earning her organization a national “Preserve America Community” designation, leading a year-long centennial celebration, serving four years as the Amgen Tour of California time trials, and significantly increasing occupancy and bed tax revenues.

Farhad’s marketing initiatives include international travel trade outreach from Denmark to China, as well as launching Restaurant Week, LGBTQ traveler education workshops and a Community Crisis Plan.

She has served on a number of boards, such as Santa Barbara Performing Arts League, DMA West Association & Foundation and as president of the Central Coast Tourism Council. She also earned an Ambassador of the Year award from the local chamber of commerce.

PUSD enters 2020 with improved credit rating

By Julia Baum

The Pleasanton Unified School District ended 2019 on a high note with an improved ‘AA-’ credit rating from Standard and Poor’s, mirroring another recent credit score upgrade.

The rating report found that the district’s “financial management practices and policies have improved,” and that upgrading from an ‘A+’ to a score of ‘AA-’ was supported by their “strong and stable budgetary performance” this past year.

District officials said the recent findings follow “years of balanced budgets for PUSD built on conservative assumptions and planning for economic uncertainties.” Earlier this year the district also received an upgraded credit rating from Moody’s — AA with a positive outlook — and a clean annual audit of Measure II expenditures.

The report also stated that “based on unaudited fiscal 2019 results, the district anticipates realizing a 1.7% operating surplus. Management notes the surplus was driven by conservative budget assumptions and salary savings.”

“We’re proud that the district’s strong fiscal stewardship is translating to credit rating increases which will support our ability to get lower interest rates that represent savings to the Pleasanton taxpayers,” Superintendent David Haglund said in a statement. “We continue to appreciate the overwhelming support from our community and will continue to keep their best interests at heart as we serve as fiscal stewards for our students and future generations.”

Standard and Poor’s also shared suggestions to help further raise the district’s credit: “We could also raise the rating if the district is able to obtain more revenue diversity outside of state-aid revenues, such as a parcel tax and foundation or basic aid status, decreasing its exposure to potential state funding volatility.”
A federal bankruptcy judge in San Francisco recently approved two settlements totaling $24.5 billion between PG&E and victims of 2017 and 2018 North Bay wildfires caused by electrical equipment failures.

The agreements approved by U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Dennis Montali on Dec. 17 include $13.5 billion for fire victims, including survivors of dozens of people who died in the fires and others who lost their homes, and $11 billion for insurance companies that have already paid claims.

Montali announced his decision at the end of a daylong hearing, saying, “There are tens of thousands of people who just want to go about their lives.”

Lawyers said during the hearing that there are 70,000 claims pending against the San Francisco-based utility.

The approvals enable PG&E to continue with a proposed financial reorganization plan to exit bankruptcy court. The utility is seeking to emerge from Chapter 11 bankruptcy by a June 30 deadline to be eligible for a new fund established by the state legislature to cushion utilities’ liability for future wildfire claims.

PG&E filed in January for the Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection, which enabled it to freeze its debts and proceedings in lawsuits while developing a financial plan.

It said in a statement Dec. 17, “Today marks an important milestone — the bankruptcy court has approved our settlement agreements resolving all major wildfire claims. This brings us one significant step closer to getting victims paid so they can rebuild their lives.

“As for our overall plan of reorganization, we remain engaged in active and constructive dialogue with stakeholders,” PG&E said.

Montali said a group of PG&E bondholders remains free to advocate a competing financial plan. That plan also includes a similar $13.5 billion for victims for losses not compensated by insurance companies.

The settlement between PG&E and lawyers for wildfire victims originally included a provision that Gov. Gavin Newsom must find that PG&E’s reorganization proposal meets the requirements of AB 1054, the law that created the wildfire fund.

But on Dec. 13, Newsom announced he believes the plan lacks the management and financial changes needed to provide “safe, reliable, and affordable service.”

On the eve of Dec. 17’s hearing, PG&E and lawyers for the victims filed a settlement amendment withdrawing the requirement that Newsom must approve the reorganization plan.

Frank Pittre, a fire victims’ lawyer who argued in favor of the settlement, told Montali Dec. 17 that Brown’s disapproval and the jeopardizing to the settlement “reopened all the wounds” for the victims.

“They thought they had a deal, then they didn’t have a deal,” he said.

Settlement approval would “finally give these folks some kind of closure that the woman had at the end of the tunnel,” he said.

Also on Dec. 17, Montali ruled that families of victims of the 2016 Ghost Ship fire at an Oakland warehouse, in which 36 people died, could go ahead with civil lawsuits in Alameda County Superior Court against PG&E and other defendants including the city of Oakland and the building owners.

The trial is set to begin on May 26 on 53 wrongful death and personal injury lawsuits, including lawsuits by the families of 33 people killed in the fire.

PG&E spokeswoman Kristi Jourdan said PG&E has not accepted liability for either the Ghost Ship fire or the 2017 Tubbs Fire in Sonoma and Napa County, in which 22 people died, but said that “claims related to those fires will be resolved as part of this settlement.”

“We’ve seen no evidence to date that would lead us to believe that our facilities were the cause of the Ghost Ship fire,” she said.

Cal Fire has concluded that the Tubbs Fire was caused by a faulty private electrical system in Calistoga, but a group of fire victims has claimed that PG&E was responsible.

Cal Fire and PG&E have agreed that the most deadly fire, the 2018 Butte County Camp Fire, in which 85 people died, was caused by a broken hook and resulting arcing of electrical wires on a nearly 100-year-old transmission tower in eastern Butte County.

In another development on Dec. 17, the California Public Utilities Commission staff announced a proposed $1.675 billion settlement with PG&E over the 2017 wildfires and the Camp Fire.

Under the settlement, which must be approved by the commission after review by an administrative law judge, the utility would be barred from obtaining $1.625 billion for wildfire-related costs through increased fees to customers, and would contribute $50 million for system enhancements and public outreach.

The agreement covers costs related to the 2017 wildfires in Butte, Calaveras, Lake, Mendocino, Napa, Nevada, Sonoma, and Yuba counties as well as the 2018 Camp Fire.

Cultural showcase at Firehouse

The Pleasanton Library and Recreation Department is set to host “2020 Pleasanton Celebrates with Traditions of Many Cultures” from 11 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. next Sunday (Jan. 12) at the Firehouse Arts Center. The annual event will feature interactive displays representing the cultures of Serbia, Korea, Vietnam, Russia, China, Malaysia, Armenia, Japan, India, USA, Native Americans and Mexico. A full-stage production will begin at 2 p.m. with performances across the many cultures.
DUSD acquiring land for new high school for $38.3M

Residents can suggest ideas for school name via online survey

Dublin Unified School District reached an agreement recently to acquire 23 acres here to house the city’s future second comprehensive high school.

A library, three-story academic tower, student union, administration building, visual and performing arts classrooms, gymnasium and other athletic facilities will be built during the first phase, estimated to cost about $166.6 million. Measure H will fund $138.8 million of that and the remaining $8.2 million will come from developer fees.

The second stage includes another three-story instructional building, a maintenance building, theater, basement, more performing arts classrooms and concessions, bleachers, concessions and a pressbox. Funding from a $200 million bond measure on the March 2020 election ballot is expected to support the school’s completion. Students could start attending the new school by fall 2022, when the first phase of work is scheduled to finish.

Earlier this year DUSD formed a naming committee in anticipation of the future campus, and is currently soliciting the community for potential names for the school. “Like Dublin High, Dublin’s second comprehensive high school will be a significant landmark in the city,” officials said. “Your contributions could have an impact on Dublin and its students for generations to come.”

Suggestions must meet certain criteria; DUSD’s policy allows naming or renaming schools “in recognition of individuals, living or deceased, who have made outstanding contributions to the city, community, state, or nation, or who have worldwide significance,” “to depict areas of curricular concentration or reflect special concepts or approaches to education,” or “in recognition of the geographic area in which the school or building is located.”

To propose a name, visit and fill out the survey at https://tinyurl.com/DSUSD-name before deciding the name of the school. For more information on the future comprehensive high school project, visit http://bit.ly/DUSD-Future-CHS.

EBRPD warns of wild mushroom dangers

Annual advisory coincides with rainy season

East Bay Regional Park District officials are warning people to be aware of the deadly mushrooms that crop up every rainy season.

Two of the world’s most toxic mushrooms, the Western destroying angel and the death cup, both grow in the Bay Area and are common in the region’s parks.

“Both of these toxic mushrooms can be lethal to humans and pets if consumed,” said park district naturalist Trent Pearce. “They are mostly associated with oak trees and can be found growing anywhere oak roots are present.”

The plants contain amatoxins that can damage the liver and kidneys in mammals.

Symptoms typically take up to 12 hours to appear after the mushrooms are consumed and start as severe gastrointestinal pain, progressing to the liver and renal failure if immediate treatment isn’t provided, according to the park district.

The death cap is a medium or large mushroom that usually has a greenish-gray cap, white gills, a white ring around the stem and a large white sac at the base of the stem.

It was introduced to North America on the roots of European cork oak trees and is slowly colonizing the West Coast, park officials said.

The Western destroying angel is also a medium or large mushroom that has a creamy white cap, white gills, a white ring around the stem that fades as the plant grows and a thin white sac at the base.

It is a native California mushroom, according to the park district.

Other toxic mushrooms that can be found in the Bay Area include the Galerina and Lepiota species.
Each year, the Pleasanton Weekly Holiday Fund raises money to support services and programs that care for local families and children in our community. The Holiday Fund partners with the Silicon Valley Community Foundation, which handles all finances, so every dollar of your tax-deductible donation goes directly to the 10 local nonprofits with no administrative expenses.

This year’s Holiday Fund recipients that will share in fund contributions are:

Axis Community Health is the Tri-Valley’s sole provider of medical and mental health services for individuals and families who have a low income or who are uninsured. It serves more than 14,000 members of our community.

CityServe of the Tri-Valley supports the community by caring for people in crisis, coordinating resources between the faith-based community, nonprofits, schools, businesses, and government agencies and connecting volunteers in the community to nonprofits.

Hope Hospice provides ethical hospice care, transition services for those not eligible for hospice, bereavement support for adults and children and end-of-life education to Tri-Valley families, regardless of insurance or income status.

Open Heart Kitchen is the largest hot meal program of its kind in the Tri-Valley feeding the hungry every weekday at multiple locations.

Pleasanton Partnerships in Education (PPIE) Foundation is an organization that has a collaborative relationship with the Pleasanton Unified School District and contributes to the needs of Pleasanton students and educators.

Sandra J. Wing Healing Therapies Foundation provides local cancer patients with complementary therapies to help alleviate the side effects caused by radiation and chemotherapy.

Sunflower Hill is working to create a sustainable residential community for individuals with special needs, similar to senior living facilities.

Tri-Valley REACH (Resources Education Activities Community Housing) for special adults of the Tri-Valley offers education programs, activities, resources and housing opportunities for adults with developmental disabilities.

ValleyCare Charitable Foundation plans to use its contribution from the annual campaign to help fund state-of-the-art health care technology, facilities, various clinical programs and services at Stanford Health Care-ValleyCare.

Valley Humane Society rescues and rehabilitates companion animals, champions responsible caretaking, shares pets’ soothing affections with people in need of comfort, and supports and preserves existing pet-guardian relationships.

City of Dublin, U.S. Army reach ‘first-of-its-kind’ deal

Camp Parks will save money using city-contracted services

Parks Reserve Forces Training Area (better known as Camp Parks) will save taxpayer money by using janitorial, pest control and solid waste services contracted by the city of Dublin, in what’s been called a “first-of-its-kind agreement in the San Francisco Bay Area,” officials with the public agencies said.

The $775,377 contract was approved at the Dec. 3 Dublin City Council meeting, and includes an administrative fee to cover vendor oversight and management by the city.

Tri-Valley Janitorial, Amador Valley Industries and Advanced Integrated Pest Management will provide services “at a lower cost and better performance of than the Army was or could contract for those services on its own,” according to city officials.

Such public-public partnerships — also known as “public-private partnerships” or mutual support agreement (IGSA) — have become more common in the Department of Defense since they first received statutory authority by the National Defense Authorization Act of 2013. IGSA arrangements are a way for military bases and neighboring communities to share cost savings, cost avoidance, and better performance. The city of Dublin and Camp Parks have partnered on projects before — the Camp Parks History Center is one notable example — by using memorandums of agreement (MOAs), but “this is the first IGSA and is a tremendous step forward in codifying the relationship between the two organizations,” the city said.

lin, including battlefield simulation and military intelligence, has been an important part of the Tri-

Valley since 1942.

City of Dublin Council and U.S. Army recently reached an agreement for Camp Parks to use city-contracted services, a deal expected to save taxpayer dollars for both agencies.

"For them to start to take away our city balance," as some council members described it, is that the state continues to want us to build housing but is not willing to chip in on the infrastructure. Do you see the state changing direction at all?" Mayor Jerry Thorne asked.

Bauer-Kahan pointed to Gov. Gavin Newsom’s veto of Senate Bill 5 — legislation she and the Pleasanton council supported that would have provided up to $2 billion in annual state funding for affordable housing, but that the governor rejected citing fiscal constraints.

She also acknowledged discussions are already underway in Democrat circles in Sacramento to continue moving toward reducing development impact fees to spur new housing projects.

“For them to start to take away the fees that help support our schools and infrastructure is not the direction we should be going in, and I think it is a giveaway to developers, to be frank with you, and a takeaway from the cities,” Bauer-Kahan said.

On the housing front, the ass-

semblywoman said she expects to see legislative action in 2020, including a bill she introduced that would require cities to have a housing element in their general plans and would allow cities to adopt a “no net loss” approach to development.

semblywoman said she expects to see legislative action in 2020, including a bill she introduced that would require cities to have a housing element in their general plans and would allow cities to adopt a “no net loss” approach to development.

Bauer-Kahan said that in addition to building housing, key issues she’ll focus on include state funding for the Valley Link project, support for fire suppression and prevention, and the future of PG&E.

Niccolé De Luca, senior director of the Tri-Valley municipalities’ consultant firm, Townsend Public Affairs, also highlighted important legislative topics for the next year.

With housing at the top, the list included emergency preparedness, PG&E bankruptcy, vaping, mental health funding, developer impact fees, Prop. 13 reform and a proposed ‘Drought, Parks and Climate Change Bond’.
After Glow

When Pat Sowa was new in Pleasanton a couple years ago, she was looking to make connections. She read in the newspaper about the Make A Difference Festival occurring each January and decided to stop by. “I had moved to Northern California from Southern California and I didn’t know anybody and needed something to do,” Sowa recalled. “I loved to cook, saw the world ‘kitchen,’ and thought that might be a good spot to be.”

She approached the booth of Open Heart Kitchen, the nonprofit group that feeds the hungry seven days a week at multiple locations in Pleasanton, Livermore and Dublin.

“T hey were so friendly,” Sowa said. “I was looking for a good purpose, and it all fell into place.”

The Make A Difference Festival is being held on Jan. 18 at the Pleasanton Senior Center, 5353 Sunol Blvd., where dozens of volunteer groups will set up booths from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. The event previously took place at the library, but this year’s venue allows for more offerings.

“Because the library’s community room is temporarily housing city offices, this year’s festival is moving to the Senior Center, which gives us more room,” explained W. Ron Sutton, president of the local nonprofit Make A Difference, Today & Always, which produces the event.

“That is why we are adding sections on wellness, and safety and emergency preparedness.”

The expanded festival is well timed in January to help residents fulfill New Year’s resolutions to live healthier; to become prepared for an emergency; and to volunteer in the community.

The event always presents a unique chance for residents of all ages to look over volunteer opportunities, talk to those who work with them and see what fits. Organizations run the gamut, from helping other people to animals to the environment and more.

“The Make A Difference Festival provides an easy way to ‘get connected and stay connected’ to our community,” Sutton said. “We will have nearly three dozen organizations seeking volunteers for a wide variety of community service projects that will be of interest to adults, families and teenagers.”

“Make A Difference Festival” to focus on volunteering along with wellness, emergency preparedness

Livermore-Amador Valley Garden Club member Surjit Kaira and president Jeri Stark explain to prospective members the many community service projects of the club.

Seminars are scheduled as follows:

• 11 a.m. — SKIP (Safety Kept in Place) training by Eden Information and Referral
• 11:30 a.m. — SKIP training
• Noon — Camping at Home: Emergency preparedness for people with disabilities, by CRIL
• 1 p.m. — SKIP training.

I pledge to spend 50 hours of community service and another 50 hours with my family.

The new wellness section will include a chance to learn about weekly “walk ‘n talk” sessions with World Walk to Wellness and to get nutrition ideas from Juice Plus. Stanford-ValleyCare will have information about its health services, and there will be representatives from Community Resources for Independent Living (CRIL), HERS Breast Cancer Foundation and Sandra J. Winging (CRIL), HERS Breast Cancer Foundation, and Juice Plus. Stanford-ValleyCare will have information about its health services, and there will be representatives from Community Resources for Independent Living (CRIL), HERS Breast Cancer Foundation and Sandra J. Winging (CRIL), HERS Breast Cancer Foundation, and Juice Plus.

Free seminars will be held throughout the event on two subjects:
- “Camping Out at Home” — presented by CRIL.
- “How to Prepare for an Emergency” — by Eden Information and Referral.

Sponsors of this year’s event are the Pleasanton Library and Recreation Department, ACCUSPLIT Make A Difference Projects, Hively, Pleasanton Community of Character Collaborative, and Karlson & Lane.

The festival is free, and everyone is invited to attend and learn about volunteering and more. The first 500 to arrive will receive tote bags from Stanford Health Services. People can contribute canned food at the site, a collection added when organizers heard that the Alameda County food bank is running low.

Another fun feature will be a police car and an armored rescue vehicle for families to explore. Make A Difference had its roots in President George H.W. Bush’s plea in the late 1980s for “a thousand points of light,” encouraging people to volunteer in their communities, Sutton said. This led to Make A Difference Day, the nation’s largest day of service, being established in 1992 on the fourth Saturday of each October. Locally, Sutton organized a Clean Up the Arroyo event.

But this conflicted with Pleasanton’s bund day,” recalled Sutton, “so we moved it to the weekend before.” It soon became apparent that January was a better time for a day of service locally, and Sutton’s community service efforts are now organized under the nonprofit group, Make A Difference, Today & Always. Its programs include the Fourth of July celebration and the Ed Kinney Community Patriot Awards in addition to the Make A Difference Festival each January.

“It is probably the single best opportunity to see a wide range of ways to get connected with the community, all in one spot at one time,” Sutton said. “It is the volunteer event of the year.”

“The timing is good, too, in January,” he added, “when people are thinking about how they might serve.”

“I believe that people want to be active, to do something,” Sutton said. “It’s about people who wanted to get connected and stay connected,” which is the theme of the festival.

The volunteer organizations consider the annual event their best chance to recruit help.

“It goes back to getting connected,” Sutton said. “I love people discovering how they can find a way to serve that meets their needs and the needs of the organization.”

This is what happened with newcomer Sowa, who now goes three days a week to help out Open Heart Kitchen.

“I’ve met such nice people. I’ve met friends,” Sowa said. “I just enjoy every minute I’m there.”

“Volunteer people are special,” she added.

Sutton emphasized that the volunteers are the fortunate ones.

“People have said, ‘You’re nice for giving.’ And I said, ‘It makes me feel good. Isn’t that selfish?’” he shared. “I love when people can find things they love to do, and it uses their talents and goodwill.”

The following nonprofit groups will be represented at the festival:

- ACCUSPLIT Make A Difference Programs
- Alameda County CASA (Court-Appointed Special Advocates)
- Alameda County Fairgrounds
- American Association of University Women (AAUW)
- American Cancer Society
- Asian Pacific Islanders American Public Affairs

Theater in 2007. The list price for to the newly opened Bankhead chased by Jean King as a donationlier Steinway model that was pur-chased in seven years.

Internationally acclaimed pian-ist Jon Nakamatsu, who has per-formed at the Bankhead Theater mul-tiple times, assisted in the selec-tion of the new piano. He played several pieces on each of five possible instruments, which were judged on sound and per-formance quality, and the Stein-way Concert Grand Model D was selected.

The Bankhead hosts dozens of performances each year requiring the use of a piano — from classical to rock, jazz and other musical genres. Given the high level of use and replacement cost, rather than purchase the new piano outright, its lease agreement allows for replacement with a new instrument in seven years.

The new piano replaces an earlier Steinway model that was pur-chased by Jean King as a donation to the newly opened Bankhead Theater in 2007. The list price for the new piano is $176,300, but the old piano was traded in and a price for a seven-year lease was negotiated.

Initial funding for the new Stein-way came from donors Linda Tinney and Jo Ann Koopman, which allowed the piano to be delivered in time for the concert. A Bankhead Piano Fund has now been created to raise money to cover the ongoing costs of the piano lease, tuning and maintenance.

For more information on the fund or to make a donation, contact Steve Glavan at 583-2304 or sgglavan@lvpac.org.

Mamma Mia!
at the Bankhead

ABBA hits backdrop for fun Greek romance

Tri-Valley Repertory Theatre is presenting the sunny and funny musical, "Mamma Mia!" opening Jan. 18 at the Bankhead Theater.

Set to the hits of ABBA, "Mamma Mía!" is the humorous story of a young woman’s search for her birth father on the eve of her wedding at her mother’s hotel on a Greek island paradise. Her quest brings three men from her mother’s past back to the island they last visited 20 years ago.

The production is produced by Kathleen Breedveld, who is also the director along with Brian Olkowski. Musical director is Sierra Dee-Rankin; choreography is by Meghan Hornbacker. Lead parts are Ammenarie Martin as Donna; Robert Lopez as Sam, and Jillian Abney as Sophie.

The show will run through Feb. 2, with Fridays and Saturdays perfor-mances at 8 p.m., and Sundays matinees at 2 p.m. plus a Saturday matinee on Feb. 1. Tickets are $21-$39. Call 373-6800, visit lvpac.org, or go to the box office, 2400 First St., Livermore.

‘Refresh’ your life in 2020

Resolutions — an optimistic way to start the year off right

BY DOLORES FOX CIARDELLI

Hit “refresh.” The start of a new year gets us excited to do just that, although perhaps not with a simple keystroke.

Exercise more. Eat healthier. These are the top two New Year’s resolutions, but perhaps goals should be less ambitious.

Make the bed every day. This sounded like a good organizational tool until recent studies showed that beds should not be made — rather, bedclothes should be pulled down all day to give the bedding a good airing. Who knew?

Eliminate fats from your diet. For years we were urged not to eat fats, and, indeed, lowfat foods became an industry. Now it turns out that only trans fats are bad for you, polyunsaturated and mono-ununsaturated fats are good for you; and saturated fats are somewhat in-between, according to Harvard Health. A good New Year’s resolu-tion is to learn more about fats this year, then resolve to eat the right ones in 2021.

Here are a few simple suggestions for this year:

• Perform random acts of kindness
• Go a day without checking email, Facebook or other online addiction
• Read a book a month
• Go a day without checking email, Facebook or other online addiction
• Volunteer (see story, Page 12)
• Get prepared for an emergency (see story, Page 13)

Doesn’t it feel good to make res-olutions? Let the glow take you at least through January. That will be one book read, one day free from email, and many acts of random kindness performed.

Are you discouraged that your resolutions never last long? Here is one that is eminently doable — drink more water. Start right now and raise that glass. Here’s to 2020! The year we began to hydrate properly.

Eco-floral designers to speak at garden club

Topics to focus on beauty and sustainability

Eco-floral designers Armando De Loera and Adam Schindler from Rose and Thorn Design will be at next week’s meeting of the Livermore Amador Valley Garden Club, presenting “Bloomed This Way! Beauty and Sustainability Together as One.”

Rose and Thorn Design, which is California Green Business-certified and based out of San Francisco, has designers who have taken floral design to the next level and want to share their eco-friendly knowledge, experience and beautification with the world.

De Loera plans to cover several topics:
• Household hunt — repurposing household items as a decorative design element.
• Garden scents — blossoming fragrance expression in floral arrangements.
• Pop of color — evoking emotions using colorful California-grown flowers.

Six floral designs will be created during the program.

De Young Museum, Saks Fifth Avenue and the annual Oakland Tulip Exhibition.

The meeting begins at 7 p.m. next Thursday (Jan. 9) in the multipurpose room at Alisal Elementary School, 1454 Santa Rita Road. Everyone is welcome. For more information about the club, visit www.lavgc.org.

Wreaths Across Pleasanton

Some 100 volunteers gathered to place Christmas wreaths on the more than 600 military veterans’ gravesites at adjoining Pleasanton Pioneer and St. Elizabeth Catholic cemeteries on Dec. 14. Held in the spirit of the national Wreaths Across America effort, the Pleasanton event was organized and led by Venture Crew 937, a co-ed branch of Boy Scouts of America. Supporting organizations and businesses included Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 6298, American Legion Post 237, The Lions Club, Trinity Lutheran Church, Home Depot and various local Christmas tree sales locations.

It’s still beating ... in Pleasanton

Four teens selected for Haugen scholarships

High school seniors lauded for exemplifying community values

By Dolores Fox Gardeelli

The Community of Character Collaborative has selected four high school seniors to receive this year’s Juanita Haugen Memorial Scholarships in recognition of their community involvement.

The teens will be honored at a luncheon in May along with other people actively working for the benefit of others, displaying the characteristics of compassion, honesty, respect, responsibility, integrity and self-discipline.

Trinity Chang

Trinity Chang is a senior at Foothill High School; her parents are Sophie Liu and Eric Chang, first-generation immigrants from Taiwan. Chang credits her parents with instilling in her the core beliefs of “work hard, be grateful and give back.”

After she struggled in high school to find a healthy balance between school and life, Chang founded the “Safe Haven,” a club where everyone can feel comfortable and discuss issues important to them. She is an advocate for mental health, and has spoken at the school district summer leadership symposium and PPE’s Fall Gala, advocating for mental awareness and education on campuses.

This past summer, Chang served as an intern for the Go Green Initiative, working with the school district and city to help the community become more eco-conscious. She is also co-president of Foothill High DECA, co-president of the Foothill National Honor Society Chapter, a commissioner on Pleasanton’s Youth Commission and principal cellist of the Oakland Symphony Youth Orchestra.

Alexander Chen

Alexander Chen, a senior at Foothill, is also a first-generation American, the son of Ke Chen and Yuan Liu.

Chen came to believe in the power of determination and self-discipline after developing a sudden-onset stutter in childhood, and he is the founder of “A Free Voice,” a national stuttering support and advocacy organization. He is also a vice president of the Foothill Model United Nations team, which he joined to improve his public speaking skills.

Through this work, Chen has realized that he wants to help those in need. In response to the 2018 Parkland shooting, he became one of the main student leaders of the Foothill walkout as well as the Tri-Valley March for Our Lives and is a gun reform activist.

Chen is also editor-in-chief of the Foothill newspaper, The Talon Times, an emergency room volunteer at Stanford Health Care-ValleyCare hospital, and a varsity water polo player. Also, intrigued with the biological origins of his stutter, he has interned with the UC San Diego Research Scholars Program, the UC Davis Young Scholars Program and the Stanford Summer Institutes of Medical Research.

Olivia Ferrari

Olivia Ferrari, a senior at Amador Valley High School, is the daughter of Jason and Diane Ferrari. She attributes her compassion for those with special needs to her neighbor, Dylan, a nonverbal quadriplegic whom she has known since she was 5, and she has joined “Night to Shine,” a prom-like event for those with special needs.

At school, Ferrari and her old friends always invite new friends and even strangers to sit with them at lunch, making their table a safe haven where all are accepted. She also passes out sunflowers to those at school who look like they could use some sunshine.

Ferrari’s other volunteer activities include knitting hats for premature babies, Adopt a Family, raising donations for a local NICU, Hively, Open Heart Kitchen, Kids Against Hunger, Wreaths Across America and Blankets for Kids. She also has participated in the French Honors Society, Ukulele Club, Girl Up Club, Botany Club and held leadership positions since elementary and middle school, including in youth programs of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Jessica Luan

Jessica Luan is also a senior at Amador Valley, and her parents are Shaofeng Luan and Jing Wu. Jessica was born in Rolla, Mo., and noted that although small it fostered a thriving multicultural community.

When Luan started high school, she noticed that food scraps, paper, plastic bottles and all the trash were thrown in the same gray bin. Concerned, she joined the Environment Club, Local Leaders of the 21st Century, and the school’s Green Team and has learned that students can shape school policy and enact change. She overcame her fear of public speaking to promote environmental issues.

Luan holds a black belt in tae kwondo, has conducted pharmaceutical science research at the University of Iowa on optimizing gene delivery for bone cell growth, is a junior volunteer at Stanford-ValleyCare hospital, and a four-year member of the girls’ golf team.

She said she is grateful to her parents, who left their homes and native tongue to provide a life better for their children, and feels a sense of responsibility to be a good role model for her younger siblings, Ari and Max.

‘Art & Wine Intertwined’

By Julia Baum

Tri-Valley residents have one final chance to catch “Worth a Thousand Words” at the Bankhead Theater in Livermore this weekend, before the exhibit that melds together the written word and visual arts disappears for good.

“Art & Wine Intertwined,” a free event this Saturday, marks the end of the collaboration between Livermore’s poet laureate Cynthia Patton and Anne Giancola, visual arts manager for the Livermore Valley Performing Arts Center, which features original artwork paired with poetry for one last time.

A poetry walk will offer “a very special tour” of the exhibit while poets read their works by the art that inspired them, and there will be a special display featuring poetry from winners of the city of Livermore’s Teen Poet of the Month contest. Handbags made from upcycled book covers and a child’s dress made from book pages also add interest, and many pieces will be for sale during the event.

A demonstration of the ancient art of calligraphy by artist Wei-Ting Chuang and live music by jazz group Mombo Combo sets the mood for wine tastings from Eliston Vineyards, Fenestra Winery, and Steven Kent Winery.

“Art & Wine Intertwined” is on Saturday from 1-30-3:30pm at the Bankhead Theater, 2400 First St. For more information, visit www.lypca.com.

Dublin memorial honors fallen deputy on somber anniversary

Dublin Police Services has paid tribute this holiday season to an Alameda County Sheriff’s Office deputy who while responding to a robbery in progress in Dublin 21 years ago.

A Christmas tree and wreath in the lobby of department headquarters, both adorned in blue, during December served as a memorial to Deputy John Paul Monego, who was the first law enforcement officer slain in the line of duty in the city’s history.

“Twenty-one years ago today, Dublin Police Deputy John Paul Monego was killed mercilessly in the line of duty. Let us never forget the ultimate sacrifice that he made, and the young family he left behind,” DPS said in a post on Twitter on Dec. 12.

In lieu of flowers, donations can be made to St. Elizabeth’s College of Nursing, 401 Stoneridge Mall Road, Pleasanton, CA 94588.

California can solve its water shortage with the water we have. Here’s how

By HEATHER COOLEY for CALMATTERS

California is at a water crossroads. We can continue our costly, 100-year-old pattern of trying to find new water supplies, or we can choose instead to focus on smarter ways of using — and reusing — what we already have.

With a population projected to top 50 million by mid-century, a booming economy and a changing climate, there is no question we need to shore up our water systems. But we don’t need an all-of-the-above strategy that sacrifices affordability and environmental health. Just like with energy, we must focus on solutions that are better for our planet and pocketbooks.

The cheapest water is the water we save.

Californians have made real strides to conserve over the past several decades. San Francisco and Los Angeles use the same amount (or less) water today as they did 30 years ago, despite substantial growth.

And farmers have dramatically increased economic output over the last 30 years while using the same amount of water — effectively producing more food and income for every drop of water.

But rain runoff can be captured and used.

Research from the Pacific Institute found that appliance and fixture upgrades, leak repair and landscape changes could reduce urban water use by up to 5 million acre-feet annually — enough water to supply more than 13 million families for a year.

On farms, precision irrigation and other water-wise practices could reduce water use by 6 million to 7 million acre-feet annually while maintaining food production and farmer income. This untapped potential for water efficiency should always be the first step towards water security.

There are also new, innovative sources of local supply.

Less than 20% of urban waste-water is being reused. There are still more than a million acre-feet of treated water we could reclaim to meet local needs. Water reuse opportunities can be found across the state, but are especially important in coastal areas, where waste(d) water is discharged into and pollutes estuaries and the ocean.

Urban runoff can also be captured and used.

Gray infrastructure like pipes and pumps will continue to play an important role in our water system. Greater infrastructure can turn urban spaces into a sponge that allows water to sink into the ground to replenish underground aquifers for later use.

Water efficiency, reuse and rainwater capture not only save money compared with costly sources like seawater desalination, they also save energy and reduce greenhouse gas emissions, which will be key for avoiding unmanageable climate impacts.

Water conservation during California’s last drought saved enough electricity to power the cities of Berkeley, Burbank and Santa Cruz for a year. Less energy use means less power plant pollution, helping California achieve our clean air and climate goals.

There are other benefits to consider as well. Reuse reduces the need to divert water from streams already stressed by rising temperatures and shrinking snowpack and can curb ocean pollution associated with sewage outfalls. Plants used to treat wastewater” by removing oils, fertilizer and other chemicals before they reach our water supply. And, of course, green spaces help to cool and beautify communities while providing a place for people to enjoy the outdoors.

California has a chance to model what a truly resilient water system looks like, combining nature and technology to make the most of every drop and dollar. Just as we are doing in the energy sector, we should be focusing on no-regrets water projects that make economic and environmental sense.

As state leaders work to meet Gov. Gavin Newsom’s call for a 21st century California water plan, I urge them to focus on sources that are both cost-effective and climate smart.

Swiss Alps: Camille and Timothy Kruziel went to Montreux, Switzerland this fall, enjoying the nice warm weather for their stay at the Fairmont Le Montreux Palace, which overlooks the breathtaking view of Lake Geneva with the Alps in the background. Montreux is a beautiful peaceful traditional town known for its microclimate and the Montreux Jazz Festival.

Mission to Bolivia: Trinity Lutheran Church and Valley Community Church sent a mission team to Cochabamba, Bolivia this summer to share Vacation Bible School program with the children of Niños con Valor—a organization with homes for children who have been orphaned, abandoned or removed from dangerous situations. NCV was created to respond to the gaps in the childcare system in Bolivia.

A lake view: Pleasanton resident Debbie Nappo spent three weeks in Italy and Germany with cousin Sharon Albertoni from Petaluma. While visiting family and enjoying the sites on Lake Como, they decided to Take Us Along!

Cruisin’ past the tower: Gail James and Jeanne Keller enjoyed many sites in Paris, including a cruise down the Seine River that passed by the Eiffel Tower.

Outside the castle: Owen, Gina, Cameron and Peter Cold took the Weekly to Malahide Castle in Ireland during their European vacation, which also included stops in Barcelona and London. This castle was one of the longest-occupied castles, from 1185 to 1975.

EBAL must rework scheduling for boys and girls basketball

Also: Finals run for Foothill boys; young martial artists compete in Puerto Rico

As the first of the year arrives, so does the beginning of the East Bay Athletic League basketball season.

I recently had a talk with one of the girls varsity coaches and was told there was discussion in the coaches’ meeting about how the EBAL scheduling should be put together.

For years the girls played on Tuesdays and Thursdays, with the boys taking the court on Wednesdays and Fridays.

It worked, and worked well. Everyone from the school was able to see the boys’ and girls’ games, and it allowed the two teams to support each other. Then someone came up with the idea that the girls deserved to play on the same nights as the boys’ games with the games taking place at opposite sites.

The Diablo Foothill Athletic League tried another plan where the boys and girls varsity teams played at the same site with the girls playing first and the boys followed, for the first half of the season. In the second half, it changed to the boys first then the girls.

Both didn’t work.

When the boys played first, half the crowd would leave following the boys’ game, and it wasn’t a pretty site. I have sat numerous times in the gym and watched at least half the crowd vacate after the boys. Its depressing and its not fair to the girls.

The girls’ teams deserve their own nights for their games, much the same way the boys do. Support would climb for both teams and make for a more festive atmosphere. In the changing demographic of the local high schools, its tough to get students out to the games. Everything possible needs to be done to make it work.

The DFAL style of scheduling was recently discussed by the EBAL girls coaches and its the wrong move. Each program should have their own night where you start with the freshmen, followed by the junior varsity and then the varsity. Its how you build pride in a program.

The scheduling needs to go back to girls on Tuesdays and Thursdays, with the boys playing on Wednesdays and Fridays. If you want, switch at the halfway point and let the girls play Wednesdays and Fridays and move the boys to Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Both teams work hard every day, and both deserve the spotlight on their own. Its not fair to throw both teams on the same night.

Foothill boys basketball

The Falcons won a pair of games to get to the finals of the Tim Cole Memorial Tournament at American High in Fremont, but then dropped a thrilling double-overtime game 65-59 in the finale.

Josh Valentine had 17 for Foothill in the finals, with Garrett Hill and Nick High finishing with 12 points each. Dylan D’Amico rounded out the double-digit scorers with 11.

In the first game of the tournament, the Falcons beat Fremont High of Sunnyvale 62-52 behind 21 points from D’Amico, with Valentine adding 11 for Foothill.

In the semifinals, the Falcons got by Washington 57-49 behind 19 points from Hill. High added 15, while Valentine and Anirudh Murugesan had 10 points each. Valentine and D’Amico were named to the All-Tournament Team.

High school hockey

Amador trotted out former players on Dec. 23 when the Dons hockey program held its Purple vs. Golf game at Dublin Iceland.

It was a pickup style game that was played with no checking and no scores being kept and a fun time was had by all.

Youth martial arts

Pleasanton’s Kokuwa Martial Arts Fitness Academy sent 12 students to Reno to compete at the League XV Finals in the fall. Kata Division champions were Jacob Herrera, Violet Thornburgh and Isabella Dominguez. Kata division runners-up were Caleb Wong, Tiana Chen, Jason Herrera, Zach Lee, Colin Chua and Eli Thornburgh.

The Sparring Division champions were Caleb Wong and Noah Wong. The runners-up were Jacob Herrera, Jason Herrera and Caydence Johnson. Tiana Chen finished third in sparring, Kaleb Chiu, Amit Johnson, Zach Lee also competed in sparring.

Two Kokuwa Martial Arts Fitness Academy students, Alexis Aying (15 years old) and Mayalanni Erediano (14) competed at the World Association of Kickboxing Organizations (WAKO) Caribbean and Central American Kickboxing Championships on Dec. 14-15 in San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Aying won a gold medal in the 13-15-year-old female 55 kg point fighting division. Erediano won a gold medal in the 14-16-year-old 47 kg point fighting division. Aying and Erediano also fought in the USA vs. Puerto Rico female 13-16-year-old tag team fight, beating Puerto Rico 11-8.

督导们投票出售县拥有的奥克兰运动场的股份

$85M purchase price allows county to pay off debt from 1995 stadium renovation

In a potentially historic move, the Alameda County Board of Supervisors voted unanimously last week to sell the county’s half ownership of the 155-acre Coliseum complex to the Oakland Athletics baseball team for $85 million.

The county and the city of Oakland have jointly owned the Coliseum complex since 1964, but county leaders decided in 2015 that they wanted to sell their share in the property so they could get out of the sports business and focus on their core mission of providing social services.

The county has been in talks with the city since 2015 about selling its share to the city, but the talks broke down in February.

The Board of Supervisors voted April 23 to authorize negotiations with the A’s about selling its share to the team, but the city filed suit Sept. 27 to try to stop the county from doing so.

However, the Oakland City Council voted last month to drop the lawsuit and enter into exclusive negotiations with the A’s to sell the city’s share of the Coliseum to the team.

The A’s, who currently play at the aging baseball stadium at the Coliseum site, are pursuing a plan to build a new baseball-only stadium at the Howard Terminal waterfront site north of Jack London Square that would be ready for the 2023 season.

The baseball team simultaneously wants to redevelop the Coliseum complex into a site that could include a large park, housing and businesses. The A’s will put down $5 million immediately as a deposit, which will remain in escrow for 190 days while the county conducts a due diligence period before the deal is finalized.

The A’s will pay $50 million a year to the county until 2023 and $15 million a year from 2024 to 2026. The A’s also will pay the county’s $5 million annual tab for operating costs at the Coliseum.

Alameda County Supervisor Nate Miley said the purchase price will allow the county to pay off its debt on the 1995 renovation of the Coliseum that the city and county used to lure the Raiders to return to Oakland from Los Angeles.

Miley said the deal will help keep the A’s in Oakland, as they’re now the last pro sports team in the city, as the Golden State Warriors moved to San Francisco earlier this year and the Oakland Raiders plan to move to Las Vegas next year.

After the vote on Dec. 23, As President Dave Kaval said, “This is truly an historic day. We’ve worked all year to get to this day.”

Kaval said the A’s are in talks with the city of Oakland about either buying the city’s share of the Coliseum property or entering into a joint venture with the city for managing the property.

He said the A’s are eager to also finalize their plans to build a stadium at the Howard Terminal site and “get a shovel in the ground” there.

Supervisor Scott Haggerty said the vote to sell the county’s share of the Coliseum is “kind of sad” and “bittersweet” because it marks the end of an era, but he also said “it’s the right thing to do” because the county can now focus on providing services to the communities it serves.

Most of the people who spoke at the board meeting said they supported the county selling its share of the Coliseum property, but Bishop Robert Jackson of Acts Full Gospel Church, senior pastor L.J. Jennings of Kingdom Builders Christian Fellowship and pastor Lawrence VanHool of the Community Church in Oakland said they’re concerned that the A’s plans to develop the Coliseum site could continue a trend in which many black people are leaving Oakland because they can’t afford to live in the city any more.

Jennings said, “When we really think about selling public land, we need to be concerned about those individuals currently in this city and how it will affect how they are able to remain in this city.”

Kaval said the A’s are committed to building affordable housing at the Coliseum site to prevent the displacement of black people and also said there will be “robust” community benefits as part of the deal.
