John Shirley, 93, former Livermore mayor and city's first veterinarian, joins current Mayor John Marchand at groundbreaking for new meeting hall.

After 30 years, Livermore City Council will have '21st century' chamber Construction has started on a new $6 million Livermore City Council meeting hall next to the city's civic center and library at Pacific and South Livermore avenues.

The 6,500-square-foot building, due for completion in the fall of 2019, will include a 124-seat council chamber in an amphitheater-styled layout and an 1,800-square-foot emergency operation center long sought by the Livermore Police Department.

Mayor John Marchand said the council chamber will be named for former Mayor John Shirley.

"This new building will allow the council to move out of the 30-year-old, triple-wide trailer where we've been holding our meetings and into 21st century Livermore, the home of technology," Marchand said at the groundbreaking ceremony.

"We'll have 124 comfortable seats, an enhanced audio-visual system and a meeting room where the audience will actually be able to see presentations, including live broadcasts in the lobby (for overflow crowds)," he added.

The new building replaces the old library on the site.

At the groundbreaking ceremony, City Manager Marc Roberts said his first assignment after being hired as an assistant planner 30 years ago was to plan for a temporary City Council chamber at 3575 Pacific Ave.

"I was told to design one that would last five years or so and to make it so ugly that they will want to tear it down," Roberts said. "The first was true but not the second."

Marchand quipped: "They told him to make it last three to five years when they really meant 35!"

The mayor said the new council meeting hall has been needed for decades and it will serve Livermore for generations to come. The new emergency operation center will replace the small room in the basement of the police department that's now used for that purpose.

"It's noteworthy to say as we start construction that there was not unanimous support for this building," Marchand said. "There was organized opposition, with some saying we shouldn't spend money on a larger more modern facility."

"However, the City Council elected to represent our residents disagreed and voted to do this," he added.

He also praised the council for deciding to name the chamber where its meetings are held for Shirley, whom he called "an iconic member of our community."

Shirley, now 93, served on the Livermore City Council from 1958 to 1966, including two years as the council-chosen mayor from 1962-1964. After serving in the U.S. Army in World War II, he attended UC Davis and then became Livermore's first veterinarian, practicing there from 1954 to 1987.

He also has a long record of volunteer service, including many years as a member of the Livermore Rotary Club, which established the John Shirley Exceptional Service Award in his honor.

He told the groundbreaking audience that he was surprised by the controversy over building a council meeting building.

"It seems these days we have to fight for everything," Shirley said. ■

ASKED AROUND TOWN

What is something that bothers you more than it probably should?

Stephanie Castner
Bank teller

It bothers me that I'm such a road-rager and can't keep my emotions in check while I'm driving. The littlest thing sets me off when I'm behind the wheel. I know it's not harmful to anyone else, but I'm upset with myself that I don't have better self-control.

Fernando Perez Deputy sheriff

Dropping the kids off at school, and picking them up, drives me absolutely nuts. There is no system in place, and it's completely inefficient and haphazard. While I'm most concerned about safety of the children, as opposed to my own lack of patience for the situation, statistically there are so few serious incidents at dropoff and pickup times that I know I should not get worked up about it.

Julie Perez
Administrative personnel

I get so annoyed by road construction that slows me down and wastes my time. I know I shouldn't be so bothered by it because it is being done to make our roads safer and better, but it bugs me when construction is making it take too long for me to get where I need to be.

Simon Cohen
Optical engineer

It truly bothers me when people are unable to communicate with one another in a civilized way when they have differing opinions. Things are not always black or white, and I get very upset when people cannot remain friends and socialize with one another just because they disagree on various issues.

Sharon Cohen
Educator and scheduling consultant

It absolutely infuriates me, more than I know it should, when people are in speaker-phone mode in a place where others who are not part of their conference call can hear their conversation. I find it so intrusive and distracting. I wish I could just tune it out, but I can't.

DIGEST

California Listens

The Pleasanton Public Library has been chosen to host “California Listens: A Digital Storytelling Workshop,” a statewide project that allows residents to share their stories about life in the Golden State.

The traveling workshop will appear at the library May 3 and 4 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Participants will receive help creating a two- to four-minute short, digital film using personal and family images, videos or archival material. Participants must commit to both full days.

Pleasanton city officials say they hope to collect a tapestry of stories for use by the library and to become a part of the California State Library’s collection. A film festival will be held in the fall of 2018 that showcases the films created through the state project.

To register, fill out an application at www.storycenter.org/pleasanton by Wednesday. For more information, visit <http://californialistens.org>.

Road repairs

The Alameda County Public Works Agency is advising commuters that crews will begin repairing pavement Monday on Vasco Road from mile marker 3.74, just past the intersection at Old Vasco Road.

The project, which will run weekdays through May 10, will include excavation, stabilizing and repaving of the depressed portion of the pavement, county officials said.

Work hours will be Mondays through Fridays 6 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. One-lane roadway access will be maintained through the work zone. Motorists should expect delays and consider alternate routes if applicable.

Also last week, Caltrans reminded drivers that rehabilitation work will continue along westbound Interstate 580 from the I-205/I-580 interchange to North Flynn Road outside Livermore from 5 p.m. to 4 a.m. weekdays through September.

Searching for family

The Livermore-Amador Genealogical Society is hosting a public service project this Sunday afternoon at the Pleasanton Library from 1:30-4:30 p.m. for residents who want to learn more about their family heritage but don’t know where to start.

The outreach event aims to help facilitate an understanding of ancestry products such as DNA research or online research databases.

Sunday’s event will offer research assistance in one-hour blocks on the half-hour starting at 1:30 p.m. For more info, visit www.L-AGS.org. ■

School board talks overcrowding solutions

PUSD staff to begin engaging community on K-8 options in north Pleasanton

By ERIKA ALVERO

It was a full house at the Pleasanton school board’s special workshop Tuesday night, as trustees and staff talked over how to best address overcrowding in north Pleasanton schools.

Specifically, the 3-1/2-hour meeting focused on facilities planning, enrollment projections and the possibility of implementing one or two kindergarten through eighth grade campuses — all three are subjects that have been discussed over the past few months, but staff and the board decided to talk about them all together in one public meeting, as they all apply to the capacity issues.

“The overcrowding of the schools in north Pleasanton isn’t going to go away,” Superintendent David Haglund said. “It’s going to get worse without a solution to it.”

As a workshop, no action was taken, a point emphasized multiple times throughout. However, trustees directed staff to begin engaging the community about K-8 possibilities, something staff didn’t want to begin if the board was against that concept.

This week, the discussion centered less on specific programs and more about how a K-8 would address the capacity problem.

The northern Pleasanton schools specifically affected by overcrowding are Donlon Elementary School, Hart Middle School and Fairlands Elementary. As an “impacted site,” in the words of Haglund, any possibility of expanding Fairlands was off the table, so the workshop centered primarily on Donlon and Hart.

The options discussed included converting Donlon and/or Hart into a K-8 school, changing the district’s enrollment boundaries, expanding the existing sites or building a new elementary school by trading or selling the district-owned Neal property on the southeast side of town for a parcel on the north.

While Haglund said no option was “off the table,” there were some constraints.

Changing enrollment boundaries or otherwise bringing children from northern Pleasanton to less-populous schools in the south side of town might keep students from attending their home schools and would just be a temporary fix, according to Board Vice President Valerie Arkin.

“Boundary changes are a pretty temporary band-aid type of fix ... We pride ourselves in this district of kids going to their neighborhood school,” Arkin said.

The board had already decided

Battling breast cancer with Bras for the Cause

Spirited 5K Saturday evening walk scheduled for April 28

By DOLORES FOX CIARDELLI

Tri-Valley SOCKS’ 13th annual Bras for the Cause will take place April 28, an energetic evening of high-spirited women walking through Pleasanton’s downtown wearing various versions of brassieres outside their clothing.

The event is a glittery affair of people battling good-naturedly for awards including most creative individual, most creative team, best electric light show and best show stopper. The 5K (3.11-mile) walk has raised more than $1.6 million to fight breast cancer; last year alone it netted $160,000, which was distributed to four local breast cancer charities.

This year the walk is Saturday, April 28, with the theme “Warriors — In It Together,” since women diagnosed with breast cancer become warriors, showing courage in the face of danger, and those who walk are committed to fight alongside them.

The 2018 walk honors survivor Diane Hughes, who was diagnosed with breast cancer for the first time in 2005; the next year she participated in her first Bras for the Cause walk. She became involved through another breast cancer survivor who had friends in Tri-Valley SOCKS (Stepping Out for Cancer Kures).

“I fell in love with this fun-loving, dedicated and hardworking group of people,” Hughes said. “I have consistently been an active volunteer since that very first walk.”

After treatments, Hughes became cancer-free until the fall of 2016 when her biannual breast

Zone 7 sells water bonds

$71.4M in proceeds to fund ozone projects, debt refinancing

By ERIKA ALVERO

Officials from the Zone 7 Water Agency recently announced the successful sale of water revenue bonds that would generate $71.4 million to be used for the agency’s upcoming ozone filtration projects and to refinance the debt from a water storage program approved over 10 years ago.

Prior to the sale, the Livermore Valley Water Financing Authority bonds received high credit ratings: an “AA+” long-term rating from Standard & Poor’s Global Ratings and a “AA” rating from Fitch Ratings.

“Zone 7 is extremely happy with the results of the bond sale which out-performed at least one recent bond sale from a similar public agency in California and will allow Zone 7 to finance the much-needed ozone treatment projects as well as realize significant cost savings related to the Cawelo capital repayment,” officials wrote in a statement.

The agency sold $64 million in 2018 Series A bonds that will generate just under $71.4 million in revenues with a true interest rate of 3.54%.

Of the bonds’ proceeds, $57 million will go toward the ozone filtration projects at the Del Valle and Patterson Pass water treatment plants. The purpose of the projects is to enhance water quality by disinfecting and treating for

Foothill students connect with company leaders for speed interviews

DECA, PPIE sponsor career prep event with Google, Workday and more

BY ERIKA ALVERO

More than 100 Foothill students recently practiced their interviewing skills during a special speed interview program with volunteers from Oracle, Workday and other locally based companies.

The program was hosted by the high school's DECA program in conjunction with the Pleasanton Partnerships in Education Foundation (PPIE) as a way to help prepare students for their own careers.

"These students are so capable and positive — I honestly came away feeling very hopeful about our future," said Stephen Hilton, board president of PPIE and a senior vice president at Robert Half International.

Students from Integrated Marketing Communications and the Economics of Business Ownership participated in the event on March 27. At the session, each student met with a volunteer for a 15-minute interview and presented a two-minute "pitch," answered interview questions and received feedback.

Volunteers also shared with students about their own career paths and experiences.

"Our students were so excited by this opportunity and they took a lead role in making it happen — from preparing their own portfolios and LinkedIn profiles to ensuring the day went smoothly for our guests," said Tami Raaker, a teacher and the DECA adviser at Foothill.

"It was really amazing to have this opportunity to interact with industry professionals and getting to hear about their career expertise and life experiences," said Rithvik Sunku, the DECA club's director of training. "As a high school student, experiences like this make me glad that I am in a career technical education class like Economics of Business Ownership."

The speed interview session comes as PPIE has been increasing efforts to connect Pleasanton students with additional resources from the local business community, including through working with the Tri-Valley Regional Occupation Program and having company representatives virtually visit classrooms.

Foothill principal Sebastian Bull

FOOTHILL DECA

Foothill DECA students planned the speed interview program in conjunction with Pleasanton Partnerships in Education Foundation leaders.

added that he hopes to expand the program next year at Foothill and with Amador Valley High.

"We're excited about the future, and we look forward to working with business and education leaders to shape that future for our students," said PPIE executive director Steve McCoy-Thompson.

The companies who participated in the session heralded from a wide array of fields: 1st United Credit Union, U.S. Rep. Amador brings back language classes from chopping block

AP Spanish 5, Honors French 5 reinstated after students speak to school board

Amador Valley High School administrators have decided to reinstate two additional advanced language sections, after seven students showed up to a recent school board meeting to oppose the planned removals from the course offerings list.

Amador school officials had decided to cancel AP Spanish 5 and Honors French 5 due to low enrollment, according to the students at the March 13 meeting, who all expressed disappointment that they would not be able to continue pursuing their respective languages.

Honors French 5 was already being taught alongside a lower-level French class, which had been raised by parents as a concern, according to the students. They pointed to the benefits of collaborative learning, adding that completely eliminating the course was not the solution.

But on March 18, Amador principal Mike Williams sent out a public statement announcing that the classes would take place in the 2018-19 school year.

"Amador Valley Administration recently reviewed how the site's 2018-19 allocation for class sections was dispersed," Williams wrote. "Since Tuesday's PUSD Board Meeting, we have determined that two additional sections should be allocated to accommodate the requests for AP Spanish 5, Honors French 5 and French 1. Teachers have been identified to teach these classes. To create the student requests for French, we are combining French 1 and Honors French 5."

Williams added that the students who had originally signed up for the courses would receive a direct email communication. ■

Changes announced for Livermore outlets

Parking program, store openings, new assistant GM and more

BY JEREMY WALSH

Management at the San Francisco Premium Outlets in Livermore unveiled a new parking program, introduced a new assistant general manager and revealed several store openings and renovations among a series of recent changes at the retail complex off Interstate 580.

First on the list is the new "Parking Made Easy Program," which aims to help address some of the parking concerns associated with the oft-crowded outlets.

Already underway, the program reserves 200 parking spots each Saturday and Sunday — on a first-come, first-served basis — for shoppers who sign up and pay $5 per day, according to Claire Marvin, public relations representative for the outlets.

Parking Made Easy is located in the premier section of the North Main Entrance, near the Gap Outlet and the food court. Customers who register for the program will also receive special offers for certain outlets and eateries.

Within the outlets, Francesca's Collections opened a new women's fashion store in Suite 2728 last month, and the new Dockers Outlet opened this week in Suite 690A.

In the next couple weeks, three remodeled stores will reopen their doors: clothing retailer Theory, skin and hair care shop EOCCitane and the Levi's Outlet.

And to help oversee the retail campus, Mia Centeno was recently hired as the outlets' new assistant general manager.

Centeno's previous experience includes working as assistant property manager for TRC Retail in San Ramon, property coordinator for CIM Group in Oakland and office administrator for the Petaluma Village Premium Outlets. A George Mason University (Virginia) graduate, Centeno also worked as a freelance editor and social media specialist for several real estate publications. ■

DECA students to compete at international conference

Falcons, Dons named state finalists, advance to Georgia event

By ERIKA ALVERO

DECA students from both Foothill and Amador Valley high schools competed at the State Career Development Conference in early March, with 34 moving on to the international conference later this month.

DECA is a global organization that aims to prepare students for careers in marketing, finance, hospitality and management.

In total, 42 students from Amador and 55 from Foothill participated in the state conference in Anaheim from March 2-5.

“Competing at the state level was so exhilarating as I got to meet and observe so many talented people around me,” said Foothill student Kylie Maeda, who placed first in the Apparel and Accessories Marketing category. “I’m really excited to be a part of something so important. DECA has opened up opportunities for me that have allowed me to grow as a student and a leader.”

Sixteen students from Foothill and 18 from Amador were first-through fourth-place finishers, meaning they earned a spot at the international conference.

The state conference involved a series of events, including competitions, workshops, networking and more. Students were judged in different categories like business administration or entrepreneurship, with distinct requirements for each type of event, from written reports or exams to presentations to mock interviews.

Students were allowed to participate in up to two events.

The two programs were publicly recognized at Pleasanton Unified School District’s March 27 school board meeting.

“next-generation leaders.”

Foothill adviser Tami Raaker echoed his sentiments. “It is a joy to teach these students,” she said. “They’re incredible and a next-generation leader is a perfect explanation.”

Raaker was also honored in Anaheim, winning the California DECA Adviser of the Year Award.

The International Career Development Conference will take place in Atlanta, Ga. from April 21-24. The trips are funded entirely by fundraising and donations, according to district officials. ■ after many talks, Trustee Joan Laursen pointed out, that they wanted to keep elementary school student enrollment at 700, which clashed with any potential expansion of the respective schools.

And the trade or sale of the Neal property for a possible new K-5 school could be difficult, considering the long process of selling the land, finding a new 10-acre spot for a new campus and construction.

When David Kaitz from Davis Demographics presented his company’s updated enrollment projections for the district, he also advised against using boundary line adjustments to solve enrollment issues, pointing to the significant enrollment growth disparities between north and south Pleasanton.

According to the demographers’ data, northern Pleasanton is projected to see a peak enrollment of nearly 2,900 students in 2023, an increase of about 460 students from this past fall. Southern schools, though, are projected to be “stable or decreasing,” Kaitz said.

However, by converting Hart and/or Donlon into a K-8 school, staff said they could potentially solve the increasing capacity problem at both the elementary and middle school levels on the north side.

“The idea was could we convert a, or more than one, school into a K-8 model to solve both the elementary overcrowding issue in north Pleasanton, and then the one that wasn’t talked about and that’s the middle school overcrowding in north Pleasanton,” Haglund said.

Though the different design options were not the primary focus of the workshop, staff touched upon it briefly.

In terms of the rationale behind the various specialized K-8 programs, assistant superintendent of educational services Odie Douglas and Jenni Tyson, director of educational services, emphasized that success of a particular model depended on its implementation, though Tyson also pointed to research indicating that fewer “transition” years could prove beneficial academically to students.

Haglund delved a little more into this topic, noting that a K-8 model could allow children to maintain relationships with staff formed in earlier grades through their middle school years, he said, years often recalled as being “rough.”

A few of the eight speakers during the public comments section asked the board to look into re-drawing boundary lines before moving to a K-8 model.

“In your survey, (really) ask parents, ‘Are you interested, to take your student to another school in south Pleasanton?’” parent Jill Jones said. “I wouldn’t be opposed to that, and I think other parents might be open to that too. Just as a possible solution.”

The issue of equity and accessibility also came up during public comments, especially in light of last workshop’s talk on possible International Baccalaureate (IB) or dual language immersion magnet schools.

“I looked at the program as much as I could, and it’s a neat program and I don’t know enough about it,” Donlon first-grade teacher Denise Morgan said of the IB program, which has an annual cost associated with it. “But I do have a problem spending money for a school, when we are really working on trying to get the school district a little bit more equitable and equal for our kids.”

Douglas emphasized that ensuring all students had equal access to any possible program would be a priority. ■ cyanotoxins, which were discovered at Lake Del Valle in 2015.

The other $14.1 million will be directed to refunding the Cawelo capital payment, an agreement between Zone 7 and the Cawelo Water District approved in 2006 providing Zone 7 with an additional 120,000 acre-feet of underground water storage in case of a drought.

By refinancing the outstanding debt through the bond sale, the agency’s interest rate on the capital payment has dropped from 4.5% to 2.9%, lowering the zone’s annual payments by about $200,000, officials say. ■

We’re looking for a few interns

We are seeking local high school or college students with an appetite for news and an interest in learning about print and digital media for internship opportunities. The intern will research stories, do interviews and help with fact checking and rewrites for the award-winning Pleasanton Weekly and DanvilleSanRamon.com. He or she will also be introduced to the other aspects of publishing, including advertising and production.

During the internship period, the intern will be an integral part of the team, participating fully in the process of gathering and presenting news.

Candidates must be responsible, have good writing skills, be available 10 to 12 hours a week and have reliable transportation. Applicants should send a resume, a cover letter explaining your interest in the internship, and links to at least two examples of your work to Jeremy Walsh, editor, jwalsh@embarcaderopublishing.com by 5 p.m. April 20.

Jail death: Inmate was arrested for Livermore carjacking

An inmate who apparently killed himself at Santa Rita Jail in Dublin on Sunday afternoon had just been arrested four days earlier for allegedly carjacking a woman at gunpoint in Livermore and leading officers on a high-speed chase, authorities said.

Logan Masterson, 37, was the inmate who was found unresponsive in his one-person cell at Santa Rita at about 4:30 p.m. Sunday, Alameda County sheriff's spokesman Sgt. Ray Kelly said.

Jail medical staff, firefighters and paramedics attempted life-saving measures on Masterson but he was pronounced dead, according to Kelly.

Masterson was booked into Santa Rita Jail on suspicion of carjacking, burglary, felon in possession of a firearm, possession of stolen property, felony reckless evading, resisting arrest and possession of metal knuckles, according to Livermore police.

The case began when a woman reported that when she was walking to her vehicle in the 2100 block of Third Street at about 7 p.m. April 4 when a man, later identified as Masterson, pointed a handgun at her and demanded her keys, police said.

Fearing for her safety, the woman gave up the keys and Masterson drove away in the victim's vehicle, police said. The victim immediately called police.

Officers found the vehicle traveling north on North Livermore Avenue at Las Positas Road and tried to make a traffic stop but Masterson zoomed away, taking the Greenville Road exit and fleeing east on Altamont Pass Road, police said.

With officers in pursuit, Masterson allegedly stopped on the shoulder of the road and resisted arrest, but officers were able to take him into custody.

The officers allegedly found two handguns in the carjacked vehicle. Another victim later reported a residential burglary in which the two handguns and other property were stolen, police said.

In accordance with Alameda County's inmate death protocol, detectives from the sheriff's Eden Township Substation in San Leandro are investigating Masterson's death, Kelly said.

The Alameda County Board of Supervisors and the Alameda County District Attorney's Office have also been notified of the death, according to Kelly. The county coroner's bureau also responded to the jail and will conduct an autopsy to determine the manner and cause of the inmate's death.

• Pleasanton police are investigating a carjacking that occurred near Stoneridge Shopping Center last week, according to a department spokesman.

The thief remains at large after the April 5 incident, though the stolen vehicle was found abandoned in Livermore later in the day, Sgt. Erik Silacci said.

The situation unfolded around 11:30 a.m. when a man visited a bank on Stoneridge Mall Road, according to Silacci. Police did not release the name of the bank.

The man took out cash from the ATM and then was approached by a stranger while walking back to his car, Silacci said. The stranger reportedly threatened the victim and demanded property, including the man's car keys.

The victim complied and the stranger sped away from the bank in the car, the sergeant said. The thief was described as a white man, about 5-foot-11 and 185 pounds, wearing gray sweatpants and a black, long-sleeved turtleneck.

Pleasanton police soon arrived at the bank, interviewed the victim and learned that the car was equipped with GPS technology, Silacci said. The vehicle was tracked to a Livermore neighborhood.

Officers from Livermore and Pleasanton police departments responded to that location and discovered the vehicle unoccupied, Silacci said. "An exhaustive search was completed, but the suspect was not located and remains at large," he added.

Anyone with information about the carjacking or the suspect can call Pleasanton police at 931-5100. Reference case No.18-13328.

• Some speeding drivers on Highway 84/Isabel Avenue in the Tri-Valley got a surprise last week — increased enforcement by several police agencies who combined to issue more than 200 citations for driving infractions during one morning commute.

The targeted enforcement effort lasted four hours the morning of April 5, aiming to help cut down on unsafe and illegal driving in the wake of major-injury crashes along Highway 84, according to Livermore police.

"This roadway has seen its fair share of serious traffic collisions, and our hopes are that increased enforcement will help slow down motorists and change poor driving behaviors," Livermore police said in announcing the results of the operation.

Highway 84 in Livermore has seen two fatal crashes in the past 11 months, including last month when a 20-year-old Stockton woman died after losing control the morning of March 16 just south of Stanley Boulevard. That's in addition to the double-fatal alleged DUI crash that occurred on Stanley just past Highway 84 during Thanksgiving week.

The enforcement effort April 5 saw 16 officers issue 232 traffic citations, according to Livermore police. Pleasanton and Dublin police officers, along with county sheriff's deputies, also took part in the operation. ■

Barbara Simonson Hill

August 27, 1961 – March 28, 2018

We lost our beloved Barbara Simonson Hill tragically and far too soon on March 28, 2018. Barb was born in Cincinnati, Ohio on August 27, 1961 to parents Ray and Thelma Simonson and was raised with her sister Mary in nearby Fairfield.

In 1983, she earned a BS in Industrial Engineering at Purdue University. Proud to be an engineer like her dad, she started her career at Naval Avionics in Indianapolis. In 1986, she married and then earned an MBA at Indiana University, Bloomington before moving to Hawaii in 1988 where she had honeymooned. She felt like family among those she worked with there at a financial software company, Users, Inc., and she enjoyed sailing, snorkeling, hiking and many wonder-filled adventures throughout the islands. In 1993, she took a job at Pac Bell Directory in San Francisco and enjoyed living city life with her husband, commuting to and from work via cable car.

In 1995 they moved to the Indian Rock neighborhood in Berkeley where they had son Griffin in 1997. Barb was, first and foremost, a loving mother and while she continued to excel professionally as a Director at Pacific Bell, she decided to focus on her children soon after daughter Emily was born in 2001. The family moved to Pleasanton in 2005 where she was actively involved in the neighborhood, the schools, the Girl Scouts and at the local fitness center Club Sport where she loved to play in tennis leagues and socialize with her multitude of good friends.

In 2015, she restarted her career with The Nature Conservancy in San Francisco. As a lifelong lover of nature and animals, it was deeply gratifying to her to be able to use her technical and managerial talents in the service of such a noble cause. She took great pride in having worked on a project to restore bird migration paths in California after the loss of wetlands due to development. She was so happy to be working with so many kind, generous and brilliant colleagues. This was her dream job and we were so happy she got to enjoy it while she was still with us.

Though her life was too short, it was full and impactful with her many contributions as wife, mother, friend, colleague, volunteer and a genuinely good-hearted human being on this planet. She is survived by her sister, Mary Hamilla, and her loving children Griffin and Emily, her cherished cats, Sweetie and Tiraimsu and a host of heart-broken extended family, friends and colleagues. She will live on in our hearts and be part of who we are always.

The family asks that donations be made to The Nature Conservancy.

Sunflower Hill says 'Thanks!'

Dear Editor,

On behalf of Sunflower Hill, please accept our sincere gratitude for your generous Holiday Fund donation in the amount of $4,949.50 to our organization. Thank you for believing in our vision.

As you know, Sunflower Hill seeks to create a sustainable residential community for individuals with special needs. We're thrilled that we now have city council approval for the Livermore as well as the Pleasanton communities. Your support is helping make this a reality.

Right now, more than 80% of adults with developmental disabilities end up living with their parents their entire lives.

With the significant increase in the number of children being diagnosed with autism (now, one in 45 nationwide!), the need for additional and permanent housing options for all individuals with special needs is greater than ever. We believe Sunflower Hill's model can change the paradigm by providing a life-long residential community that's akin to a senior living community.

In 2015, we launched our beautiful garden at the historic Hagemann Ranch in Livermore. In 2017, more than 13,000 pounds of fruits, vegetables and herbs were harvested, with 78% going directly to local shelters and community food kitchens in our area to feed low income families.

As you also know, we also run programs providing horticulture training and garden access to adult day programs, local high school special day and transition students, and to our interns, serving over 202 special needs individuals.

Thank you again — we're thrilled to have your support.

—Sarah Renton,
Administration assistant

Holiday Fund helps schools

Pleasanton Weekly's Holiday Fund is a wonderful tradition that benefits the entire community, and we thank you for the truly generous grant of $9,989, which directly supports our Pleasanton students and supplemental school staff.

PPIE will use the funds for two main programs.

First, a portion will support our annual teacher and student grant program. The program funds innovative STEAM projects that directly impact over 1,000 students each year by enabling them to experience coding, robotics, biology labs and many other projects.

This program is made possible by a generous donation from Oracle, and the Holiday Fund will extend our reach to more students.

According to one Amador teacher, "Your support has sustained and lifted my program to new heights and reached over 1,200 students. My former students, who are now in college or working in the biotech industry, often comment on how much better their lab skills are compared to their classmates. This is really a reflection of PPIE and your commitment to students at AVHS. Because of you, my students are better prepared for college and 'the real world.'"

Second, we will also help fund more librarian staff hours at our schools — to keep school libraries open during lunch, recess and after school. One elementary school librarian thanked PPIE with a heartfelt story about how the refuge of the library helped one shy girl find her place and a group of friends that enabled her to stay in school.

Texting while driving will kill you

I drive on Northern California freeways every morning, five days a week. I encounter drivers of motor vehicles on the freeways that are texting while they are driving.

They are drifting into my lane of travel in front of me while they are texting and driving.

On one recent occurrence of this type of activity, I honked my horn at the texting driver. She over-corrected and drove into the lane of traffic on the right, miraculously escaped collision with vehicle in that lane she over corrected into, because the vehicle driver in that lane was alert and avoided the texting driver.

The texting driver in this incident was a young lady. As a result of this incident, I will never again honk my horn at a texting driver. I will simply give them all the roadway necessary, for them to kill themselves. Hopefully, they do not kill innocent people in the process.

Texting drivers are not limited to young ladies. I encounter older male drivers engaged in texting while driving. There is a lot of texting drivers on the freeways of every age, of every nationality, of all genders.

This violation of motor vehicle code is impossible to enforce. There is no resolution for this texting while driving demise.

However, most all motor vehicles manufactured today now have hands-free technology for answering calls, and with programmable voice commands, can make calls. However, there will remain the text nuts, no matter the sophistication of available technology to avoid texting while driving.

ARTIST'S JOYRIDE CONTINUES

Positive attitude finds expression in portraits, motorcycles and jewelry

BY DOLORES FOX CIARDELLI

To see the delicate designs on her jewelry, you might not guess that Holly Ellsworth-Rose dreams of riding a Harley-Davidson through the Black Hills of Dakota.

"I sold my Harley before I got married and had kiddos," said the Pleasanton artist, who was one of Harley's two licensed fine artists — and the only woman.

Her dad was her mentor, a man who painted and sculpted, and taught her to do the same. In 1993, when he bought a Harley-Davidson, he introduced her to the adventure of riding in the wilds of scenic Utah.

Holly, who was earning her living doing airbrushed portraits, began to focus on painting closeups of the legendary motorcycles as well as children gazing with wonder at the Harleys.

MIKE SEDLAK

Holly Ellsworth-Rose, an electrical engineer by trade, also has had a career painting portraits and children with Harley-Davidsons. She was one of the two artists licensed by the company, and its CEO bought two of her original paintings, including "Fill 'er Up," above. Now she is creating jewelry, and the sliced corks she paints red and adorns with hearts are bestsellers. At right, she works on a whimsical painting of her favorite animal (the giraffe) using a "scumbling" technique to show layers of colors.

"Harley-Davidson had one artist, Scott Jacobs, who was authorized to paint Harleys," Ellsworth-Rose recalled. "My mom was living in Sacramento and saw that Scott Jacobs was going to be at a gallery."

Her mother shared Holly's paintings, and the publisher said to have her get in touch.

"My first painting incorporating kids and Harleys was 'Hog Dreams,' and I used a friend's son," Ellsworth-Rose said. "My second one, 'Fill 'er Up,' was my most successful. A little boy is pumping gas, and a little girl is drinking an orange soda."

She would come up with ideas then scout out a locale with the elements she needed for her paintings — the perfect gas station and gas pumps, the right children.

Her Harley paintings were large, sold for $15,000-$18,000, and took six months to finish. Harley-Davidson CEO Jeff Blustein and his wife Brenda bought two for their art collection, "Getting in Gear" and "Fill 'er Up."

"They told me they had just been to the Norman Rockwell museum and that my artwork reminded them of his," Ellsworth-Rose remembered, adding that she considered it the ultimate compliment.

She created a series of her children and Harley paintings, which were distributed and sold internationally. "Getting in Gear" was made into a jigsaw puzzle distributed by Target nationwide.

Ellsworth-Rose said she has been making art as long as she can remember, holding a pencil or crayon in her hand or molding wax in her young fingers. She grew up with her mother in Northern California and spent summers with her father in Utah.

"My dad later went back to school to get an art degree," Ellsworth-Rose said. "I got my creativity from him."

When she went to Chico State, her goal was financial freedom and she majored in electrical engineering then worked for a small engineering firm in Folsom. But she realized she wanted something more creative — and to be her own boss.

She honed her sculpting skills and created statues of children, while working part-time at Intel, but found each piece took a long time and needed a commensurate price tag. After several years, she began airbrushing custom portraits, working 24/7 in her garage to support herself — after she sold one to a gallery in Folsom, she began to meet gallery owners and earn a living in photo-realistic portraits.

"Then my dad bought a Harley Davidson. He was living in Salt Lake City, and we'd go on rides," she said. "Utah is so beautiful. And I fell in love with the people and the machines — incredible people, diverse, all amazing."

Eventually Ellsworth-Rose returned to engineering, working in sales, then met her husband and moved back to Northern California.

"We had kids (now 12 and 14), and I would dabble in painting," she said.

Now, after six years in Pleasanton, she creates jewelry, with a studio and office in her home.

"It's really exciting to learn about marketing, about business," she said.

"I started putting my images on metal washers first," she added. "One of the things that was super frustrating for me was that even my prints were, like, $250 or $1,000, not affordable to everyone. And having kids, I can't spend six months on a painting."

She dubbed her jewelry "Cheeryos," due to the shape of the washers when she began — round with a hole in the middle — but also because of their upbeat designs.

"It's my hope that women feel cheery when they wear them," Ellsworth-Rose explained.

She said she enjoys seeing what she can do with "found objects," and going wine-tasting with friends, she "found" corks.

"I turn the corks into necklaces," she said. "I slice them on my saw and sand them, and add a chain and dangly beads. I make them fun. They are my latest 'canvas.' A red cork with a little heart is one of my more popular pieces."

"I want to focus on hearts and simple reminders so people can put on one of my bracelets and it puts a smile on your face, creates a second of positive energy," she continued.

"I've always tried to be thankful for everything I have. That is one of the keys to happiness. As long as my family is healthy, how can I be anything but positive?"

Her catalog will be out soon but for now her jewelry and artwork can be seen at cheeryos.com. ■

Opera presents 'Three Decembers'

Frederica von Stade to star in role created for her

By DOLORES FOX CIARDELLI

Livermore Valley Opera will present mezzo-soprano Frederica von Stade in Jake Heggie's "Three Decembers" in a starring role created just for her, at the Bankhead Theater at 7:30 p.m. April 28 and 3 p.m. April 29.

This production celebrates the 10th anniversary of the contemporary opera, which has adult themes and language, and was the first American opera performed by Livermore Valley Opera.

"I feel so blessed to have another chance to sing Jake Heggie's wonderful 'Three Decembers,'" von Stade said.

LVO artistic director Erie Mills, who has sung in operas with von Stade before, saw her perform in "Three Decembers" last year.

"I heard her sing the opera in Honolulu in March 2017, and I asked her if she would be interested in singing it for LVO," Mills said. "This is a wonderful opportunity to perform this opera with Ms. von Stade. It will offer a unique experience for audiences because the story is about family and relationships, something anyone can relate to, and it is in English."

The two-act chamber opera is based on an unpublished play, "Some Christmas Letters," by Terrence McNally. Set in the month of December in the years 1986, 1996 and 2006, "Three Decembers" tells the story of a famous actress, Madeline, and her two adult children as they struggle to know and love each other. It's a universal story about the family we wish for, and the family we wind up with.

"The character Maddy that I play is a famous actress who has known all the ups and downs of a life in show biz," von Stade explained. "She has suffered and she has caused suffering, especially to her two children, Bea and Charlie, because she has hidden a very tragic fact from them."

"The opera is full of wonderful humor, pathos, light and darkness, and through Jake's beautiful music and the amazing libretto of Gene Scheer, we get to know three very interesting people, three very real people, and find a little bit of ourselves in them."

The April 29 matinee will be followed by a dinner to benefit the opera, at 5 p.m. at Veterans Memorial Hall, 522 South L St. in Livermore. The dinner will include appetizers, a three-course paella dinner, Livermore wines and a chance to meet the singers.

Tickets for the opera are $42-$90. Go to LVOpera.com or the Bankhead box office, 2400 First St. in Livermore, or call 373-6800. Tickets to the benefit dinner are $200, of which $100 is an LVO donation. ■

U.S. Air Force brass ensemble to perform at Bothwell

Free concert is part of Livermore arts community outreach

The Travis Brass, one of the ensembles of the U.S. Air Force Band of the Golden West, will offer a free concert at the Bothwell Arts Center at 7 p.m. April 23, presented by the Livermore Valley Performing Arts Center. Although the event is free, space is limited and tickets are required.

The Travis Brass has two trumpet players, Technical Sgt. Thomas Salyers and AFC Alan Matteri; Staff Sgt. Daniel Nebel on French horn; Senior Airman James Wright on trombone; and Senior Airman Lee Jarzembak on tuba.

Matteri has performed as part of the orchestra for Livermore Valley Opera and a number of other local groups since graduating from California State University East Bay.

In addition to supporting military ceremonies and presenting free concerts, the Travis Brass preserves American music heritage by providing assistance for music educators and students.

This free concert with the Travis Brass is one of several new initiatives of the Livermore Valley Performing Arts Center.

"It is part of our mission to reach out to people across the community and offer a variety of arts opportunities," executive director Scott Kenison said. "We are shifting our emphasis and plan to provide open houses or backstage tours where people can get a more intimate look at the venue and can ask questions and interact with our staff."

"The Bankhead Theater and Bothwell Arts Center are facilities that provide a true community benefit, helping to make the arts accessible for everyone," he added. "We want to actively involve and engage people with our venues and events."

Bothwell Arts Center is located at 2466 Eighth St. Request tickets at the Bankhead Theater box office at 2400 First St., call 373-6800 or visit lvpac.org. Limit is four tickets per family. ■

Towne Center hosting Abbi Waxman

Author to discuss writing 'Other People's Houses'

Abbi Waxman apologized to her mother on Elle.com last Mother's Day in a compilation from five writers who are now also moms.

"My refusal to eat anything green from the ages of 1 to 14," Waxman began, and went on to mention the "whole blue eyeliner period" and her "tastelessness in Mother's Day jewelry choices (giant rhinestone peacock pin, anyone?)."

Waxman, who was born in England but now lives in Los Angeles with her three daughters, three dogs, three cats and "one very patient husband," is appearing at 7 p.m. next Wednesday at Towne Center Books to discuss and sign her latest novel, "Other People's Houses."

In the book, Frances is the queen of her cul-de-sac's school carpool crew. But when one of her charges sends her to retrieve forgotten school supplies, Frances stumbles on her friend Anne Porter having a 9 a.m. quickie with a younger man who is definitely not her husband.

The idea for the plot grew out of Waxman's own carpooling duties.

"Every time I was sitting in a car pickup line, at school, at camp, at whatever, I was always seized by an overwhelming sense of ennui," Waxman said. "For some reason, sitting in a long line of idling vehicles, waiting for children, is a soul-crushing experience."

After Frances discovers the infidelity, the novel alternates between the perspectives of four families, as the affair unravels the neighborhood and exposes — to comedic effect — each household's insecurities, neuroses and strife.

"Part 'Desperate Housewives' and part 'Peyton Place,' Waxman's latest novel still remains wholly original," according to RT Book Reviews.

LEANNA CREEL

Author Abbi Waxman is coming to Towne Center Books next week.

"The compelling peek behind closed doors is simultaneously witty and wince-inducing, and potentially heavy themes are handled with authenticity, charm and a healthy dose of irreverence."

Waxman's first novel was "The Garden of Small Beginnings." She worked in advertising for many years, and says that is where she learned to write fiction.

"Other People's Houses" was published by Berkley Books/Penguin Random House in paperback and sells for $16. ■

Unique trio coming to St. Augustine

Pianist and composer Ira Stein is bringing his trio back for a concert on April 28 at 8 p.m. at St. Augustine Catholic Church in Pleasanton. The trio is made up of piano, cello and soprano saxophone, an unusual combination of instruments, that play a unique style of music, blending Bach improvisations with original compositions. Tickets are available at the door only; $15 adults and $10 for students/seniors. For information, go to www.catholicofpleasanton.org.

Sister cities celebrate 35 years of friendship

Pleasanton welcomes
Tulancingo delegation next week

By JEB BING

Pleasanton will host a delegation of 30 representatives from its sister city Tulancingo, Mexico next week to mark the 35th year of friendship between the two communities.

The Tulancingo visitors will join local members of the Pleasanton-Tulancingo Sister City Association (PTSCA) for a six-day celebration that will start with a breakfast Wednesday at the DoubleTree Hilton Hotel. After meetings with city officials, wine-tasting and a Bay cruise, the anniversary event will conclude April 22 with a farewell dinner and a final breakfast the next day.

The public is invited to join in some events by invitation from PTSCA members and to a picnic from noon to 4 p.m. April 22 at the Amador Recreation Center. Those planning to attend must let association representatives know ahead of time.

The Sister Cities program was created by President Dwight Eisenhower after World War II as a means of fostering bonds between people from different communities around the world. By forming these relationships, Eisenhower reasoned that people from different cultures could understand, appreciate and celebrate their differences while building partnerships that would lessen the chance of new conflicts.

Today, this network unites tens of thousands of citizen diplomats and volunteers in over 500 member communities with more than 2,000 partnerships in 145 countries on six continents.

"The PTSCA has allowed many in Pleasanton and Tulancingo to know each other's culture at a personal level, which has led to a better understanding between our communities and families that we wouldn't have had the opportunity to share otherwise," said Margo Tarver, a member of PTSCA since 1989 and currently the organization's publicity director.

"Through this organization, we've also created a student exchange program that helps high school students to enrich their experiences in many ways, including improving their skills in speaking and understanding English and Spanish," she added.

After participating in the program, Natalie Kleffman, who was a senior at Foothill High School at the time, told Tarver that by staying with a family in Tulancingo during a summer, she had "the feeling of complete and total security in a foreign country."

"You made friends in two months that you feel closer to than people you've known for two years," Kleffman said.

Similar to Kleffman's trip, the PTSCA arranges for youths from local schools to travel to their sister city where families host the students in their homes for three weeks. This allows them to experience another culture in a safe, monitored environment.

But PTSCA is more than a student exchange program. As Eisenhower envisioned, the Pleasanton-Tulancingo compact has evolved into a bilateral swapping of ideas, friendship, business and culture. Even the climate, farmers markets and city governments are similar.

That's what led Bob Athenour, an Amador Valley High

Margo Tarver,

School Spanish teacher (now retired), and former real estate executive Steve Noble to choose Tulancingo after a group met to seek out a sister city for Pleasanton. Traveling there and finding similar interest from Tulancingo civic leaders, the two encouraged the city councils of both cities to ratify a sister-city affiliation May 10, 1983.

The first delegation of 17 people from Tulancingo came to Pleasanton in September 1984. It was greeted by a parade on Main Street, a band performance at Amador Valley High and local business leaders. Delegates from each city have been meeting ever since.

Nearly every year, the PTSCA hosts a Cinco de Mayo fiesta, sends a Pleasanton delegation to Tulancingo or hosts one from there, participates with a float in the Pleasanton Holiday Parade, and sponsors seminars, booths and discussions on Mexico-related topics, including coordinating events with both Pleasanton high school Spanish clubs, local businesses and local service and charitable organizations.

"I've been in Tulancingo many times and always marvel at the similarity between our two cities," said Tarver, who served eight years on the Pleasanton Library Commission.

She continued: "They make cheese like we used to do at the Cheese Factory; they have a dairy industry like Pleasanton once had. Even the view from the hills as you drive toward Tulancingo is much like the one we have of Pleasanton as we drive down the Dublin grade on I-580. It's a marvelous experience."

Tarver will join other members of Pleasanton's PTSCA delegation in next week's festivities. They will include Jorge Victoria, president; Noble and David Streubing, vice presidents; past president Rita Prieto-Galvin and her husband Jay, association historian Corrine Mavridis and Athenour, who is now director emeritus.

The Tulancingo delegation will include its current president Martha Soto and four past presidents as well as the Tulancingo fire chief Jesus Garcia.

Just three years ago, Garcia received two out-of-service fire trucks that were donated by the Livermore-Pleasanton Fire Department. Last year, during a visit by a Pleasanton delegation, Garcia unveiled the two trucks that his department had refurbished and are now in use in Tulancingo.

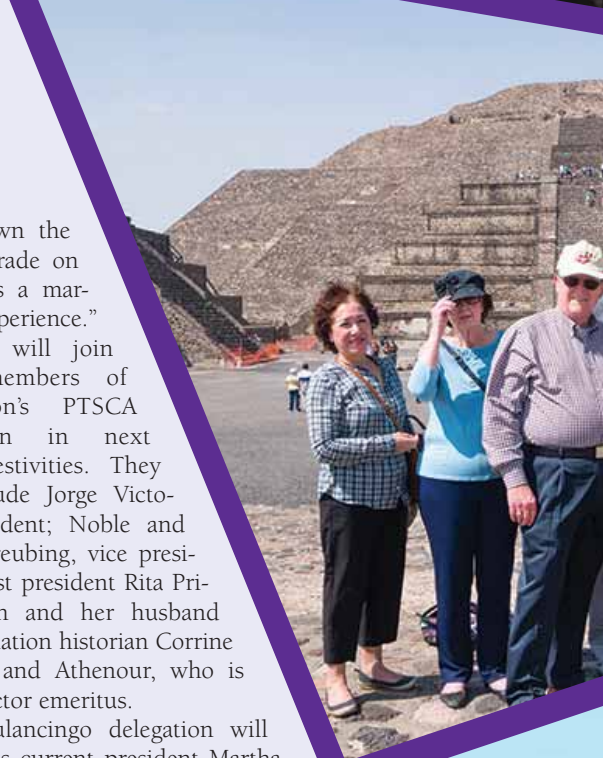

On tap for the coming week's celebration are a welcome dinner at Castlewood Country Club next Wednesday night, a tour of Lawrence Livermore National Laboratories in Livermore on Thursday, a Hornblower cruise on the Bay and "Big Band Night" at Garré Winery on Friday and the picnic and farewell dinner that Sunday.

Next Saturday, the Tulancingo visitors will travel to Benicia, which is also their sister city.

Although Tulancingo is Pleasanton's oldest sister city, the city also has established a sister city association with Blairgowrie, Scotland and Fergus, Ontario, Canada.

Two other Tri-Valley cities also have sister-city affiliations. Dublin's sister city is Bray, Ireland. Livermore has three: Quetzaltenango, Guatemala; Snezhinsk, Russia; and Yotsukaido, Japan.

Foothill baseball takes Big O Classic title

Also: Amador basketball star Mia Fisher kicks off 'top athlete' retrospective

Even with the schools out for spring break last week, local teams were still hard at work participating in tournament play.

The Foothill baseball team made the most of its break, taking the title of the Big O Classic tournament.

The Falcons opened the tournament with a 14-3 win over Santa Rosa.

The offensive stars included Owen Camp, who posted four hits and three runs scored. Roman Sahagun added three hits, two runs and drove in a pair. Josh Anderson, Ben Hansen, Josh Robinson, Matt Ager and Jason Dormann shared time on the mound in the win.

In the second game, Foothill gained a measure of revenge with a 9-3 victory over Heritage — the only team to beat Foothill this season.

The Falcons had 10 hits in the game, including triples by Sam Novitske and Jeremy Lea and a double by Jake Simons. Brett Hansen earned the win and was supported out of the bullpen by Dylan Pottgieser and Seugman Shim.

The win put the Falcons into the title game, where they thumped Freedom 12-1.

Foothill jumped out to an early lead, posting six runs in the bottom of the first and then three more in the second inning. Foothill rapped out 12 hits, including multiple hits by Novitske who doubled in to start the game, Sam Zevanove who posted a two-run triple and Ben Hansen who had a two-run double. Shim earned the win, James Kroll, Robinson and Dormann also contributing.

Amador softball

The Dons headed south for the break and won a pair of games in the Michelle Carew Classic in Anaheim.

Amador beat Huntington Beach 3-1 behind a big game from Danielle Williams — who homered and drove in a pair of runs at the plate, and went the distance in the circle, striking out six and allowing four hits.

Maude Fouque and Valeria Torres-Colon added hits for the Dons.

Amador also edged Lakewood 1-0 despite getting out-hit 4-2.

Williams struck out 15 in the game and allowed only four hits again. Mia Hildebrand and Bridget Aguilar had the two Amador hits, and Torres-Colon scored the lone run.

Foothill swimming

The Falcons overall had a great measure of success against Dublin, winning both the boys and girls varsity meets, as well as the JV girls. The JV boys fell by only five points.

The following swimmers dropped best times in the meet: Lizzie Balicanta, Emilie Clark, Bill Dai, Lauren Graham, Ava Haase, Ainsley Hasty, Michaela Hoyman, Dillon Kathian, Jackson Koempel, Eugene Kruger, Lucas Lee, Andrew Li, Courtney Olivier, Bailey Pierce, David Reimer, Steven Reimer, Camille Rodriguez, Addie Sciammas, Jalen Shen, Nick Skinner, Alison

Smith, Drake Southern, Grace Tuttle and Brad Ye.

Be Strong Swimathon

The Be Strong and Give Back Happiness Swimathon, benefiting the UCSF Benioff Children's Hospital, will take place Sunday, April 22 at the Pleasant Valley Swim Club.

Organized by former Children's Hospital patient Sarah Banholzer, 16, and her mother, Teri, the event runs from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. To sign up for the event that is open to adults and children, go to www.2018bestrongswimathon.eventbrite.com.

Top athletes

As promised last week, starting with this column, I will list some of the top athletes and teams from Amador Valley and Foothill over my 30 years of covering prep sports in town.

This week it's all about former Amador girls basketball star Mia Fisher.

Fisher led the Dons to the CIF State finals in 1999 and 2000 and was one of the best basketball players — male or female — that I had the pleasure of covering. She was a point guard for the Dons and was the female equivalent of Jason Kidd.

Yes, she was that good.

Blessed with tremendous court sense as well as the ability to score whenever needed, Fisher brought a sense of excitement to the girls' game that is rarely seen, combining sizzling play-making skills with tremendous grace on the court.

After her Amador career was done, Fisher played for UC Santa Barbara, and then spent eight years playing professionally in Europe. ■

"We hired Tim to sell our house in Pleasanton in January of 2018. Tim assessed our house and put together a detailed marketing and pricing strategy. The marketing materials, staging, and recommended upgrades made our house look fantastic. We had the house open for one weekend and had multiple offers the next week. We ended up selling the house above our asking price and within the range Tim thought we would get. We were extremely happy with Tim, his team and the whole process he managed."
